NEW QUESTION # 825

Good leaders get involved in their subordinates' careers. People merely obey arbitrary commands and orders, but they respond quickly and usually give extra effort for leaders who genuinely care for them. An often neglected leadership principle in today's environment of technology and specialization is knowing the workers and showing sincere interest in their problems, career development, and welfare. Leadership is reflected in the degree of efficiency, productivity, morale, and motivation demonstrated by subordinates.

Leadership involvement is the key ingredient to maximizing worker performance.

A key leadership principle that's often ignored is:

- A. maximizing worker performance
- B. leading by example
- C. showing sincere interest in the problems of the workers
- D. ensuring workers have access to the most modern technology

Answer: C

Explanation:

The passage doesn't address leading by example or use of technology by workers, so Choices A and C would be incorrect. Maximizing worker performance is a result of leadership involvement, not a principle of leadership, making Choice D incorrect. The correct answer is found in the third sentence of the passage.
