dbt Labs dbt Analytics Engineering Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q224-Q229):

NEW QUESTION # 224

You encounter a runtime error: "Column 'order_date' not found in the target relation". You examine your model and see:SQL

- A. Verify that your Jinja templating in other models isn't interfering with column names.
- B. Review the fct_orders model's SQL logic to see if it unintentionally removes or renames the 'order_date' column.
- C. Check if the fct_orders model or source actually includes an 'order_date' column.
- D. Ensure there are no downstream models that could be altering the 'fct_orders' table.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Start with the basics! This error typically indicates a schema mismatch between your assumption and the actual data structure.

NEW QUESTION # 225

You've defined development, staging, and production targets in your dbt project. You want to prevent accidental execution of destructive model materialization strategies (like drop or truncate) on the production target. How could you achieve this?

- A. Rely purely on thorough code reviews to prevent execution of these commands in production.
- B. Create a separate profiles.yml file for production that disables dangerous materialization strategies.
- C. Write a custom macro that only executes such operations on non-production targets.
- D. Implement a CI/CD process that includes checks to prevent specific dbt commands from running in the production environment

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

A Macros can provide conditional logic for model execution based on environments- C: Automated checks in CI/CD pipelines add a layer of protection. D: Relying solely on code reviews is prone to human error.

NEW QUESTION # 226

You're working with a model that aggregates data across many countries. Which assumption about the data might be especially important to test for and handle in your model logic?

- A. Different regions may use varying currency exchange rates.
- B. Time zones and daylight savings rules for timestamps could differ between data sources.
- C. Encoding formats (UTF-8, etc.) may be inconsistent across source systems.
- D. The presence of unexpected HTML tags within textual data fields.

Answer: A,B,C

Explanation:

Each of these introduces unique challenges for aggregating data globally. While D can be an issue, it's less central to this specific scenario.

NEW QUESTION # 227

32. You are creating a fct_tasks model with this CTE:

with tasks as ( select * from {{ ref('stg_tasks') }}

You receive this compilation error in dbt:

Compilation Error in model fct_tasks (models/marts/fct_tasks.sql)

Model 'model.dbt_project.fct_tasks' (models/marts/fct_tasks.sql) depends on a node named 'stg_tasks' which was not found Which is correct? Choose 1 option.

Options:

- A. A `stg_tasks` has not been defined in `schema.yml`.
- B. There is no dbt model called `stg_tasks`.
- C. There is no `stg_tasks` in the data warehouse.
- D. `stg_tasks` is configured as ephemeral.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The dbt compilation error explicitly states that the model `fact_tasks` depends on a node named `stg_tasks`, but dbt cannot find any resource with that name in the project. dbt resolves `ref('stg_tasks')` at compile time by searching for a model, seed, or source named `stg_tasks`. When no such model exists, dbt raises the exact error shown: "depends on a node named 'stg_tasks' which was not found." This error occurs before execution and is unrelated to whether the table exists in the warehouse. For dbt, the existence of a warehouse table is irrelevant during compilation—only the presence of a declared dbt resource matters. Therefore, option C (no table in the warehouse) cannot cause this error.

Option A is incorrect because ephemeral models still count as dbt models, and dbt can resolve `ref()` to them without problem.

Option D is wrong because defining a model in `schema.yml` is optional and unrelated to dbt's ability to find the model. Tests and documentation require YAML entries, but model definitions do not.

Thus, the only correct explanation is that no model file named `stg_tasks.sql` exists under `/models`, making Option B the correct choice.

NEW QUESTION # 228

You're working with a dbt project in both development and production environments.

Which configuration technique is best suited to handle differences in database connection details between these environments?

- A. Define multiple profile sections within the `dbt_project.yml`
- B. Create separate branches for each environment and maintain different `dbt_project.yml` files in each branch.
- C. Use the `target` flag when running dbt commands.
- D. Utilize environment variables in conjunction with the `profiles.yml` file.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Environment variables and a corresponding `profiles.yml` provide the most flexible and secure way to manage environment-specific settings.
