To sit for the exam, candidates must have at least five years of experience in information security management, with three of those years being in a role specifically related to information security management. Alternatively, candidates can substitute up to two years of experience with a relevant four-year degree. Upon passing the exam, candidates will receive the CISM certification, which is valid for three years before requiring renewal.

The CISM exam is designed for professionals who have experience in information security management and are looking to advance their careers in this field. CISM exam covers four domains: Information Security Governance, Risk Management, Information Security Program Development and Management, and Information Security Incident Management. Each domain focuses on a particular aspect of information security management, and the exam requires candidates to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of each domain.

The CISM Exam is recognized by many organizations worldwide and is considered an essential certification for professionals seeking to advance their careers in information security management. Certified Information Security Manager certification is particularly relevant for information security managers, IT security professionals, risk management professionals, and compliance officers. The CISM certification is designed to demonstrate a professional's ability to effectively manage information security risks and provide value to their organization.

ISACA Certified Information Security Manager Sample Questions (Q785-Q790):

NEW QUESTION # 785

Which of the following would be the MOST appropriate physical security solution for the main entrance to a data center"?

- A. Closed-circuit television (CCTV)
- B. Mantrap
- C. Biometric lock
- D. Security guard

Answer: C

Explanation:

Section: INFORMATION SECURITY PROGRAM MANAGEMENT

Explanation:

A biometric device will ensure that only the authorized user can access the data center. A mantrap, by itself, would not be effective. Closed-circuit television (CCTV) and a security guard provide a detective control, but would not be as effective in authenticating the access rights of each individual.

NEW QUESTION # 786

Which of the following is MOST important to include in an information security status report management?

- A. Review of information security policies
- B. information security budget requests
- C. Key risk indication (KRIs)
- D. List of recent security events

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

Key risk indicators (KRIs) are the most useful to include in an information security status report for management because they measure and report the level of risk exposure or performance against predefined risk thresholds or targets, and alert management of any deviations or issues that may require attention or action. List of recent security events is not very useful to include in an information security status report for management because it does not provide any analysis or evaluation of the events or their impact on the organization's objectives or performance. Review of information security policies is not very useful to include in an information security status report for management because it does not reflect any progress or results of implementing or enforcing the policies. Information security budget requests are not very useful to include in an information security status report for management because they do not indicate any value or benefit of investing in information security initiatives or controls. NEW QUESTION # 787

Which of the following is the MOST important reason for performing a cost-benefit analysis when implementing a security control?

- A. To ensure that benefits are aligned with business strategies
- B. To justify information security program activities
- C. To present a realistic information security budget
- D. To ensure that the mitigation effort does not exceed the asset value

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 788

Which of the following is MOST likely to affect an organization's ability to respond to security incidents in a timely manner?

- A. Misconfiguration of security information and event management (SIEM) tool
- B. Lack of senior management buy-in
- C. Inadequate detective control performance
- D. Complexity of network segmentation

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 789

The PRIMARY advantage of single sign-on (SSO) is that it will:

- A. support multiple authentication mechanisms.
- B. strengthen user passwords.
- C. increase the security of related applications.
- D. increase efficiency of access management

Answer: D

Explanation:

Single sign-on (SSO) is a technology that allows users to access multiple applications or services with one set of credentials, such as a username and password. The primary advantage of SSO is that it increases the efficiency of access management, as it reduces the need for users to remember and enter multiple passwords for different applications or services. SSO also simplifies the user experience, as they can log in once and access multiple resources without having to switch between different windows or tabs. SSO can also improve the security of related applications, as it reduces the risk of password compromise or phishing attacks. However, SSO does not strengthen user passwords or support multiple authentication mechanisms by itself. It is a complementary technology that enhances the security and convenience of access management. References = CISM Review Manual, 16th Edition, page 991 The primary advantage of single sign-on (SSO) is that it increases the efficiency of access management. With SSO, users only need to remember one set of credentials to access all of their applications, rather than having to remember multiple usernames and passwords for each application. This simplifies the user experience and helps to reduce the amount of time spent managing access to multiple applications. Additionally, SSO can also increase the security of related applications, as users are not sharing the same credentials across multiple applications, and it can also support multiple authentication mechanisms, such as biometric authentication.
