ISACA Certified in the Governance of Enterprise IT Exam Sample Questions (Q122-Q127):

NEW QUESTION # 122
An organization's board of directors has questioned the value provided by IT key performance indicators (KPIs). Which of the following is the BEST way to determine whether the KPIs adequately support organizational objectives?

- A. Define policies and procedures around current KPIs.
- B. Review the KPIs with key business executives.
- C. Define a strategy for IT measurement.
- D. Work directly with the CEO to identify what measures should be used.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Defining a strategy for IT measurement is the best way to determine whether the KPIs adequately support organizational objectives, as it would help to establish a clear vision, scope, purpose, and alignment of the IT measurement activities. A strategy for IT measurement would also help to identify the relevant stakeholders, roles, responsibilities, and expectations for the IT measurement process, and to define the criteria, methods, and tools for selecting, collecting, analyzing, and reporting the KPIs. The other options are not as effective, as they do not address the root cause of the board's question, which is the lack of a coherent and consistent approach to IT measurement. NEW QUESTION # 123

What is the PRIMARY benefit of aligning information architecture with enterprise architecture (EA)?

- A. It enables the tracing of data to business functions.
- B. It ensures the adoption of enterprise data quality standards.
- C. It facilitates appropriate access to data consumers.
- D. It improves communication with senior management and the business.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Information architecture is the design and organization of data and information assets in an enterprise, such as databases, documents, metadata, and taxonomies. Enterprise architecture (EA) is the holistic view and planning of the business strategy, processes, systems, and technology in an enterprise, such as business architecture, application architecture, data architecture, and technology architecture1. Aligning information architecture with EA means ensuring that the data and information assets are consistent, coherent, and supportive of the EA goals and objectives2.
The primary benefit of aligning information architecture with EA is that it enables the tracing of data to business functions, which means that the data can be linked to the business processes, activities, roles, and outcomes that use or produce it. This benefit has several advantages for the enterprise, such as34:
Improving data quality, accuracy, and reliability by identifying and resolving any data issues or gaps in the business functions Enhancing data governance, security, and compliance by defining and enforcing the data policies and standards for the business functions Increasing data value, usability, and accessibility by providing the data consumers with relevant and timely data for their business functions Supporting data-driven decision making and innovation by enabling the analysis and evaluation of data for the business functions The other options are not the primary benefit of aligning information architecture with EA, but rather secondary or potential benefits. Improving communication with senior management and the business is a benefit of EA in general, but not specific to information architecture alignment. Ensuring the adoption of enterprise data quality standards is a benefit of data governance, which may be facilitated by information architecture alignment, but not guaranteed. Facilitating appropriate access to data consumers is a benefit of data security and privacy, which may be improved by information architecture alignment, but not directly.
