CompTIA Data+ Exam (2025) Sample Questions (Q30-Q35):

NEW QUESTION # 30
A data analyst receives a notification that a customized report is taking too long to load. After reviewing the system, the analyst does not find technical or operational issues. Which of the following should the analyst try next?

- A. Check whether other peers have the same issue.
- B. Check that the appropriate filters are applied.
- C. Check data source connections.
- D. Check for data structure changes in the report.

Answer: B

Explanation:
This question pertains to the Data Governance domain, focusing on data quality and report performance optimization. The report is slow despite no technical issues, suggesting a data-related inefficiency.
* Check that the appropriate filters are applied (Option A): Applying filters reduces the dataset size by excluding irrelevant data, improving report performance. This is a logical next step after ruling out technical issues.
* Check data source connections (Option B): The analyst already reviewed the system and found no operational issues, so connectivity is likely not the problem.
* Check for data structure changes in the report (Option C): While possible, this is a deeper investigation step and less likely to be the immediate cause of slowness.
* Check whether other peers have the same issue (Option D): This might confirm the issue's scope but doesn't directly address the performance problem.
The DA0-002 Data Governance domain emphasizes "data quality control concepts," including optimizing report performance through techniques like filtering.

NEW QUESTION # 31
A data analyst troubleshoots a dashboard every day for a week. Which of the following techniques best addresses how to validate the data moving forward?

- A. Rebuilding the dashboard
- B. Setting up monitoring alerts
- C. Reaching out to users daily
- D. Inquiring about structure changes

Answer: B

Explanation:
This question pertains to the Data Governance domain, focusing on ensuring data quality and reliability in dashboards over time. Daily troubleshooting indicates a recurring issue, and the task is to validate data moving forward.
* Inquiring about structure changes (Option A): This might identify past issues but doesn't provide ongoing validation.
* Setting up monitoring alerts (Option B): Monitoring alerts can automatically notify the analyst of data issues (e.g., missing updates, errors), providing a proactive way to validate data continuously.
* Reaching out to users daily (Option C): This is inefficient and reactive, not a sustainable validation method.
* Rebuilding the dashboard (Option D): Rebuilding might fix current issues but doesn't ensure future validation.
The DA0-002 Data Governance domain includes "data quality control concepts," such as implementing monitoring to ensure data reliability in dashboards.

NEW QUESTION # 32
A report triggers an error that prevents information from being displayed. However, the report was functional before a database upgrade. Which of the following should a data analyst do first to troubleshoot the problem?

- A. Verify the connection to the database.
- B. Ensure the system has permissions for the report service.
- C. Check whether the data structures were modified.
- D. Change the report's refresh rate.

Answer: A

Explanation:
This question falls under theData Concepts and Environmentsdomain, which in DA0-002 involves understanding database environments, connections, and troubleshooting issues related to data access. The scenario describes a report failing after a database upgrade, indicating a potential issue with the database environment or connectivity.
* Ensure the system has permissions for the report service (Option A): While permissions issues can cause report failures, they are less likely to be the first issue after a database upgrade unless explicitly mentioned.
* Change the report's refresh rate (Option B): Refresh rate adjustments might address performance issues but won't resolve a fundamental error preventing data display.
* Verify the connection to the database (Option C): A database upgrade often involves changes to connection strings, drivers, or network configurations. Verifying the connection ensures the report can access the database, making this the most logical first step.
* Check whether the data structures were modified (Option D): While possible, checking data structures (e.g., schema changes) is a deeper troubleshooting step that should follow after confirming basic connectivity.
The DA0-002 Data Concepts and Environments domain includes understanding database connectivity, similar to DA0-001's focus on "data schemas and dimensions" and environments (web ID: 1). Verifying the connection is the first recommended step in troubleshooting post-upgrade issues.
