NEW QUESTION # 209

A company is planning to improve the segmentation of its data center network to isolate traffic of different clients across various parts of the facility. The solution must be highly scalable and provide flexible traffic isolation for a growing number of clients. Which action must be taken to best meet the requirements?

- A. Configure VXLAN Multi-Tenant mode to segregate traffic by using different network identifiers.
- B. Implement VRF-Lite to segment traffic between different network environments.
- C. Implement VXLAN with IP-based VLAN segmentation to provide separation for each client while using standard Layer 3 routing.
- D. Enable VXLAN with Border Gateway Protocol EVPN to provide separation and granular routing control.
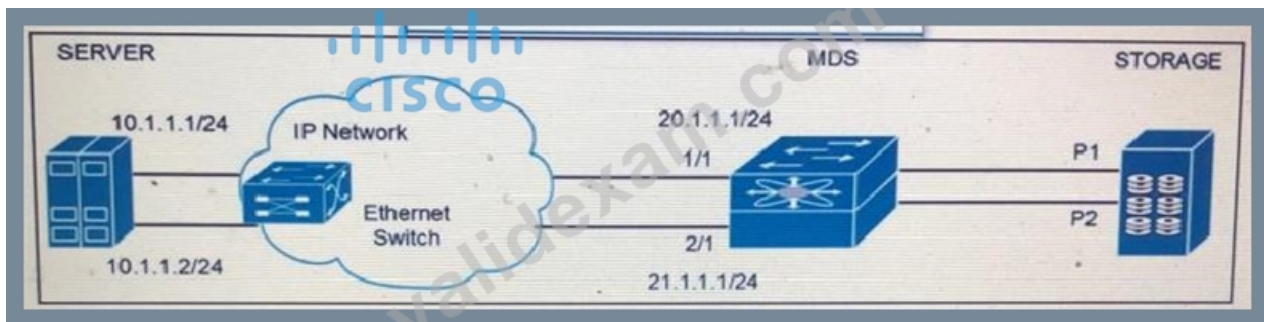

Answer: D

Explanation:
VXLAN with BGP EVPN control plane scales to thousands of tenants by using EVPN Route-Type advertisements for MAC and IP-to-VNI mappings. This approach delivers flexible, multitenant isolation and optimizes inter-VNI routing without flooding, making it ideal for a growing client base.
