NEW QUESTION # 83
In an Agile environment, which type of model looks at how users interact with the required features of the system and can be used to decompose a backlog of user stories?

- A. State machine diagram
- B. Use case diagram
- C. Class model.
- D. Entity relationship diagram.

Answer: B

Explanation:
The Use Case Diagram is a conceptual model that shows the interaction between users (actors) and the required features (use cases) of the system. In an Agile context, use cases provide a high-level view of the system's intended functionality, which can be directly mapped to Epics and subsequently decomposed into lower-level User Stories. The use case diagram helps the team understand the scope and the user's interaction paths, making it an excellent visual tool for managing and breaking down the product backlog (of user stories) into manageable chunks. The other options are too technical (A, D) or focus only on object state (B).

Which technique is used to help understand how an organisation's products and services meet customer expectations by looking at product and service attributes as well as image and customer relationship?

- A. SIPOC
- B. SWOT analysis
- C. Value proposition
- D. Porter's five forces.

Answer: C

Explanation:
The technique focused on analyzing the fit between an organisation's offerings and customer needs, specifically examining the combination of product and service attributes, the company's image, and the customer relationship, is the Value Proposition. The Value Proposition describes the unique benefits, value, and experience that a company promises to deliver to its customers to satisfy their needs and wants better than the competition. It's a critical tool for ensuring that the business improvement efforts are truly valuable from a customer's perspective. Porter's Five Forces and SWOT analysis are macro-strategic tools, and SIPOC is a process analysis technique.
