Salesforce Certified Hyperautomation Specialist Exam Sample Questions (Q61-Q66):

NEW QUESTION # 61

An employee at AnyAirlines uses RPA Recorder to capture actions performed when carrying out a business process automation. How does this help expedite RPA process development?

- A. BPMN is autogenerated with documentation and workflows containing the recorded actions that are automatically created during the build phase.
- B. BPMN is autogenerated, including documentation in the form of images and a fully functional RPA process with workflows and conditional branching.
- C. BPMN is autogenerated with complete test plans and run configurations that can be executed in the test and production phases.
- D. BPMN is autogenerated, which includes documentation in the form of images and a complete recording of keyboard actions and wait times.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Using RPA Recorder to capture actions performed during a business process automation helps expedite RPA process development in the following way:

Autogenerating BPMN:

The RPA Recorder captures the business process as it is performed and autogenerates a Business Process Model and Notation (BPMN) diagram. This diagram includes a visual representation of the process, making it easier to understand and modify.

Detailed Documentation:

Along with the BPMN, the recorder generates detailed documentation that includes images of the steps performed, as well as a complete recording of keyboard actions and wait times. This provides a comprehensive view of the process, which can be reviewed and refined.

Expediting Development:

By automating the creation of BPMN and detailed documentation, the RPA Recorder significantly reduces the time required to document and design the RPA process manually. This allows developers to focus on refining and optimizing the process rather than starting from scratch.

- A. It posts to a configured Chatter profile.
- B. It sends a message to a configured Slack channel.
- C. It sends a notification to the configured email address.
- D. It generates a notification in the flow.

Flow Error Handling: When an error occurs in a MuleSoft Composer flow, the error is logged and visible on the Flow Details page.

Email Notifications: MuleSoft Composer can be configured to send notifications to a specified email address. This allows users to be promptly informed of any issues without having to constantly monitor the Flow Details page.

NEW QUESTION # 65

AnyAirlines has MuleSoft Composer installed on their production Salesforce environment.

To test flows with data in multiple non-production environments, what does the hyperautomation specialist need to do?

- A. Use mocked data because non-production data is not available to MuleSoft Composer.
- B. Install MuleSoft Composer in each of the non-production Salesforce environments.
- C. Create a connection to each of the non-production environments within the Composer UI.
- D. Install MuleSoft Composer in only one non-production Salesforce environment and create a proxy to all other non-production environments.

Answer: C

Explanation:

* Create Connections: To test flows with data in multiple non-production environments, creating connections to each environment within the MuleSoft Composer UI is necessary. This allows the Composer to access and manipulate data across different environments, ensuring comprehensive testing.

* Installing Composer in Non-Production Environments: While installing Composer in each environment is technically possible, creating individual connections is more efficient and aligns with best practices.

* Using Mocked Data: Mocked data can be useful for initial testing, but connecting to actual non-production environments provides more realistic test scenarios.

* Proxy Setup: Creating a proxy to other environments is complex and unnecessary when Composer supports direct connections.
