NEW QUESTION # 51

A Data Cloud Consultant Is in the process of setting up data streams for a new service-based data source.
When ingesting Case data, which field is recommended to be associated with the Event Time field?

- A. Escalation Date
- B. Creation Date
- C. Last Modified Date
- D. Resolution Date

Answer: B

Explanation:
The Event Time field is a special field type that captures the timestamp of an event in a data stream. It is used to track the chronological order of events and to enable time-based segmentation and activation. When ingesting Case data, the recommended field to be associated with the Event Time field is the Last Modified Date field. This field reflects the most recent update to the case and can be used to measure the case duration, resolution time, and customer satisfaction. The other fields, such as Resolution Date, Escalation Date, or Creation Date, are not as suitable for the Event Time field, as they may not capture the latest status of the case or may not be applicable for all cases. NEW QUESTION # 54

Cumulus Financial is experiencing delays in publishing multiple segments simultaneously. The company wants to avoid reducing the frequency at which segments are published, while retaining the same segments in place today.
Which action should a consultant take to alleviate this issue?

- A. Adjust the publish schedule start time of each segment to prevent overlapping processes.
- B. Increase the Data Cloud segmentation concurrency limit.
- C. Enable rapid segment publishing to all to segment to reduce generation time.
- D. Reduce the number of segments being published.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Cumulus Financial is experiencing delays in publishing multiple segments simultaneously and wants to avoid reducing the frequency of segment publishing while retaining the same segments. The best solution is to increase the Data Cloud segmentation concurrency limit . Here's why:
Understanding the Issue
The company is publishing multiple segments simultaneously, leading to delays.

Reducing the frequency or number of segments is not an option, as these are business-critical requirements.

Why Increase the Segmentation Concurrency Limit?

Segmentation Concurrency Limit :

Salesforce Data Cloud has a default limit on the number of segments that can be processed concurrently.

If multiple segments are being published at the same time, exceeding this limit can cause delays.

Solution Approach :

Increasing the segmentation concurrency limit allows more segments to be processed simultaneously without delays.

This ensures that all segments are published on time without reducing the frequency or removing existing segments.

Steps to Resolve the Issue

Step 1: Check Current Concurrency Limit

Navigate to Setup > Data Cloud Settings and review the current segmentation concurrency limit.

Step 2: Request an Increase

Contact Salesforce Support or your Salesforce Account Executive to request an increase in the segmentation concurrency limit.

Step 3: Monitor Performance

After increasing the limit, monitor segment publishing to ensure delays are resolved.

Why Not Other Options?

A). Enable rapid segment publishing to all to segment to reduce generation time :Rapid segment publishing is designed for faster generation but does not address concurrency issues when multiple segments are being published simultaneously.

B). Reduce the number of segments being published :This contradicts the requirement to retain the same segments and avoid reducing frequency.

D). Adjust the publish schedule start time of each segment to prevent overlapping processes :While staggering schedules may help, it does not fully resolve the issue of delays caused by concurrency limits.

Conclusion

By increasing the Data Cloud segmentation concurrency limit , Cumulus Financial can alleviate delays in publishing multiple segments simultaneously while meeting business requirements.
