ISQI ISTQB Foundation Level - Acceptance Testing Sample Questions (Q55-Q60):

NEW QUESTION # 55

On a project to develop an event booking platform, a review session is being conducted on acceptance test cases written in Gherkin's language. Consider the following test case:

1. GIVEN I am logged in on the event booking platform
 2. AND I have selected an event from the list displayed for the "live concert" category
 3. WHEN I click "Buy Tickets" button
 4. AND I enter "3" into "Ticket quantify" field
 5. AND I agree on terms and conditions
 6. THEN The system should display the checkout page
 7. AND I should provide my personal data for payment and eticket delivery
- Which of the following sentences MOST closely corresponds to a comment that could be made on this test case during the review?

- A. Line 3 refers to an element to the user interface, which is to be avoided and line 7 is an action and not a result
- B. This test case is perfectly written
- C. Line 3 refers to an element of the user interface which is to be avoided, line 4 the quantity should not be set and line 7 is an action and not a result
- D. The "When" part lacks an action to enter number of tickets request that is greater than the limit allowed per person

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Gherkin syntax (Given-When-Then), the purpose is to describe system behavior in a way that's understandable to all stakeholders. Test steps should focus on user intentions and observable results - not UI implementation details - to ensure maintainability and abstraction.

Line 3 ("click 'Buy Tickets' button") refers explicitly to a UI element, which should generally be avoided in acceptance tests. Instead, it could say "I request to buy tickets." Line 7 ("I should provide my personal data") is describing an action the user must take, not an outcome or result. In a Gherkin "Then" step, we expect an observable system response, not further user interaction.

Option C identifies both of these review concerns correctly.

Other options:

A includes an incorrect comment about line 4 ("quantity should not be set") - setting a value is acceptable.

B is false - the test case has reviewable issues.

D might be valid in a different context (e.g., boundary tests), but that's not a flaw in the existing scenario.

C). Line 3 refers to an element of the user interface, which is to be avoided and line 7 is an action and not a result

NEW QUESTION # 56

Which of the following statements describes an advantage of bi-directional traceability between requirements / user stories and test cases?

- A. Testers can easily identify the source code module that most probably causes the defects observed during test execution
- B. Business analysts can verify the completeness of the user stories / requirements with respect to business needs
- C. Project managers and/or product owner can analyze the coverage of test cases for a given requirement / user story
- D. Test case reviewers can verify whether the test case covers all acceptance criteria of the linked requirement / user story

Answer: C

Explanation:

Bi-directional traceability is a fundamental concept in requirements engineering and test management. It refers to the ability to trace: Forward: From requirements/user stories to corresponding test cases (to ensure all requirements are covered).

Backward: From test cases to the requirements they validate (to ensure every test aligns with a requirement).

According to the ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level and Acceptance Testing syllabi, bi-directional traceability is essential to manage test coverage and ensure completeness. It allows project managers and product owners to assess whether all specified requirements/user stories have been covered by appropriate test cases, helping to identify any untested functionality.

This also supports impact analysis during change management - knowing which test cases will be affected by a change in a requirement.

Option B is correct because it precisely captures this benefit. While Option C refers to reviewing test cases against acceptance criteria (a valid review activity), the bi-directional traceability's key benefit from a management and quality assurance perspective is traceability for coverage.

NEW QUESTION # 57

Which one of the following statements describes an exploratory test charter BEST?

- A. Acceptance testers use the exploratory test charter during the testing session to define the test oracle.
- B. Indicating that the tester should take the role of a novice user can be part of an exploratory test charter.
- C. Each exploratory test charter is based on a previously defined list of activities that would be interesting to test.
- D. The test charter is elaborated during the testing session according to test execution results.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 58

Which of the following statements corresponds BEST to a UX requirement analysis activity?

- A. Personas are used to analyze products or solutions from competitors.
- B. Environmental conditions such as light conditions are obtained from a task analysis.
- C. Security requirements are derived from usage scenarios.
- D. User profiles are used to determine different levels of business knowledge.

Answer: B

Explanation:

UX (User Experience) requirement analysis involves studying the context in which users will interact with a system. This includes analyzing:

Who the users are (personas/user profiles)

What tasks they perform (task analysis)

Where and how they perform them (environmental conditions)

Option D is correct because task analysis in UX encompasses understanding the user's physical and digital environment.

Environmental conditions (e.g., lighting, noise, interruptions) are important for designing accessible and effective interfaces.

Let's review other options:

A is partially correct but not fully aligned - personas describe user archetypes, not primarily competitor analysis.

B refers to user profiling but interprets it narrowly. Business knowledge is only one part of profiling.

C confuses security with UX. Security requirements often come from risk analysis, not usage scenarios.

D). Environmental conditions such as light conditions are obtained from a task analysis.

NEW QUESTION # 59

Which one of the following test design techniques fits accepting testing purposes BEST?

- A. equivalence partitioning
- B. input validation
- C. defect-based test design
- D. static code analysis

Answer: A
