ISACA Certified in the Governance of Enterprise IT Exam Sample Questions (Q264-Q269):

NEW QUESTION # 264

Following a strategic planning session, new IT objectives were announced. Which of the following is the MOST effective way for the CIO to ensure these objectives are cascaded to IT personnel?

- A. Define individual performance measures related to the IT objectives.
- B. Communicate the new IT objectives during a staff meeting.
- C. Establish IT management's performance measures based on the IT objectives.
- D. Update the IT balanced scorecard to align with the new IT objectives.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The MOST effective way for the CIO to ensure that the new IT objectives are cascaded to IT personnel is to define individual performance measures related to the IT objectives. Cascading goals is a framework to get everyone in an organization aligned with the big picture organizational goal, and to make sure they know what to do by breaking strategy into clear tasks and deliverables¹. By defining individual performance measures related to the IT objectives, the CIO can:

* Communicate the expectations and priorities of the IT function to each IT staff member²

* Link the individual goals and activities to the IT objectives and the organizational strategy³

* Motivate and empower the IT staff to take ownership and responsibility for their work⁴

* Monitor and evaluate the progress and performance of the IT staff and provide feedback and recognition⁵ The other options are not as effective as option B. While it is important to communicate the new IT objectives, establish IT management's performance measures, and update the IT balanced scorecard, these are not sufficient to ensure that the IT objectives are cascaded to IT personnel. They are rather means to achieve the end goal of aligning and measuring the IT objectives at different levels of the organization. They do not necessarily translate into clear and specific actions and outcomes for each individual IT staff member.

- A. Update the IT strategic plan to align with the decision.

NEW QUESTION # 268

Which of the following is MOST important when an IT-enabled business initiative involves multiple business functions?

- A. Conducting a systemic risk assessment
- B. Defining cross-departmental budget allocation
- C. Establishing a steering committee with business representation
- D. Developing independent business cases

Answer: C

Explanation:

Establishing a steering committee with business representation is the most important factor when an IT-enabled business initiative involves multiple business functions, because it ensures that the initiative is aligned with the strategic goals and needs of the organization, and that the different business functions have a voice and a stake in the decision-making process. A steering committee can also provide guidance, support, and oversight to the IT team and help resolve any conflicts or issues that may arise among the business functions. A steering committee can also monitor the progress and performance of the initiative and ensure that it delivers the expected benefits and value to the organization.
