Answer: C

Explanation:

Reference:<https://docs.splunk.com/Documentation/Splunk/8.0.3/Knowledge/Abouttransactions>

A transaction is a group of events that share some common characteristics, such as fields, time, or both. A transaction can be created by using the transaction command or by defining an event type with `withtransactiontype=true` in `props.conf`. Events in a transaction have one or more fields in common that relate them to each other. For example, you can create a transaction based on `JSESSIONID`, which is a unique identifier for each user session in web logs. Events in a transaction do not have to have the same timestamp, sourcetype, or exact same set of fields. They only have to share one or more fields that define the transaction.

NEW QUESTION # 127

Which of the following statements describes the use of the Field Extractor (FX)?

- A. The Field Extractor uses PERL to extract fields from the raw events.
- B. Fields extracted using the Field Extractor persist as knowledge objects.
- C. The Field Extractor automatically extracts all fields at search time.
- D. Fields extracted using the Field Extractor do not persist and must be defined for each search.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement that fields extracted using the Field Extractor persist as knowledge objects is true. The Field Extractor (FX) is a graphical tool that allows you to extract fields from raw events using regular expressions or delimiters. The fields extracted by the FX are saved as knowledge objects that can be used in future searches or shared with other users.

NEW QUESTION # 128

Which of the following file formats can be extracted using a delimiter field extraction?

- A. PDF
- B. XML
- C. JSON
- D. CSV

Answer: D

Explanation:

A delimiter field extraction is a method of extracting fields from data that uses a character or a string to separate fields in each event. A delimiter field extraction can be performed by using the Field Extractor (FX) tool or by editing the `props.conf` file. A delimiter field extraction can be applied to any file format that uses a delimiter to separate fields, such as CSV, TSV, PSV, etc. A CSV file is a comma-separated values file that uses commas as delimiters. Therefore, a CSV file can be extracted using a delimiter field extraction.
