Saviynt Certified Advanced IGA Professional (Level 200) Sample Questions (Q41-Q46):

NEW QUESTION # 41

The EIC administrator has a requirement for integrating EIC with ServiceNow as a ticketing system, where end users should be able to check the status of associated tickets in ServiceNow from EIC. What option can the administrator utilize to fulfill this requirement?

- A. CREATETICKETJSON
- B. It is not possible to check the status of ticket in ServiceNow
- C. TICKETSTATUSJSON
- D. SYNCTICKETSTATUSJSON

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC integration with ServiceNow as a ticketing system (ITSM), various JSON configurations are used to define how tickets are created, updated, and tracked. To enable users to check the status of tickets from EIC, the correct configuration is TICKETSTATUSJSON.

TICKETSTATUSJSON is specifically used to define how Saviynt retrieves the current status of a ticket from ServiceNow. It maps the API response fields from ServiceNow (such as state, status, or resolution) to Saviynt fields, allowing the system to display real-time ticket status within the EIC interface.

Option A (SYNCTICKETSTATUSJSON) is typically used for synchronization jobs that update ticket statuses in bulk, not for direct user-level status retrieval. Option B (CREATETICKETJSON) is used only for ticket creation, defining how requests are sent to ServiceNow. Option D is incorrect because Saviynt does not support ticket status tracking through proper integration configuration. Thus, TICKETSTATUSJSON is the correct option to enable visibility of ticket status within Saviynt EIC.

NEW QUESTION # 42

Which of the following scenarios are True to trigger Technical Rule Execution in EIC? (Multi-Select)

- A. The existing user is updated and satisfies a user update rule with action as Re-run provisioning rules
- B. When a user is deleted and the condition in the rule matches
- C. A new user is registered or created from the UI and the condition in the rule matches
- D. When users are imported through Import Job and the condition in the rule matches

Answer: A,C,D

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, Technical Rules are triggered based on lifecycle events related to user creation, updates, and imports, provided the defined conditions evaluate to true. The correct answers are B, C, and D.

Option B is correct because during Import Jobs, when users are brought into Saviynt from authoritative sources, Technical Rules are evaluated, and if conditions match, they are executed. This is a common mechanism for provisioning access during onboarding.

Option C is also correct since when a new user is created via the UI, Technical Rules can be triggered if the user attributes meet the rule conditions. This ensures consistent provisioning regardless of how users are created.

Option D is correct because when an existing user is updated, and a User Update Rule is configured to re-run provisioning rules, it can trigger associated Technical Rules again.

Option A is incorrect because deletion events typically trigger deprovisioning workflows rather than standard Technical Rule execution.

Thus, Technical Rules are triggered during import, creation, and update events—not deletion.

NEW QUESTION # 43

For which of the following options duplicate identities can be identified in EIC?

- A. By running Duplicate Identity Detection Job
- B. While Updating Users through Admin > Identity Repository
- C. All of the above
- D. While Importing Users

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, Duplicate Identity Management (DIM) supports multiple mechanisms to detect duplicate identities across the identity lifecycle, making Option D (All of the above) the correct answer.

Firstly, duplicate identities can be detected during user import (Option A) when data is ingested from authoritative sources like HR systems. Saviynt can apply matching rules and prevent or flag duplicates at the ingestion stage. Secondly, duplicates can be identified by executing the Duplicate Identity Detection Job (Option B), which is a detective control that scans existing identities in the repository and identifies potential duplicates based on configured correlation rules such as email, username, or employee ID. Additionally, duplicates may also be identified during manual updates in the Identity Repository (Option C) when administrators modify user attributes. If updated values match existing identities based on defined criteria, Saviynt can flag potential duplicates. These multiple detection points ensure both proactive and reactive duplicate management, helping maintain identity data accuracy and preventing access risks associated with duplicate identities.

NEW QUESTION # 44

What is the use of the Show XML option in a workflow?

- A. It shows the Workflow version history
- B. It enables users to open and view the Workflow XML script in a read-only mode
- C. It allows users to create new JSON wirings from scratch
- D. It provides the ability to edit the Workflow XML script

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, workflows are internally represented in XML format, which defines the sequence of approval steps, conditions, and actions. The "Show XML" option is specifically designed to allow administrators to view the underlying XML structure of a workflow. However, this view is provided in a read-only mode, meaning administrators can inspect the configuration but cannot directly modify it from this option.

This feature is particularly useful for debugging, auditing, and understanding workflow logic, especially in complex approval processes involving multiple steps and conditions. It helps administrators verify how a workflow is constructed without risking accidental changes to the configuration.

Option C is incorrect because editing workflow XML is not typically done directly through the "Show XML" view in Saviynt UI; modifications are handled through workflow configuration screens or controlled import/export processes. Option A is unrelated since Saviynt workflows are XML-based, not JSON-based. Option B is also incorrect because version history is managed separately and not through the Show XML option.

Thus, the correct purpose of "Show XML" is to view workflow configuration safely in read-only format.

NEW QUESTION # 45

An EIC Administrator has a requirement to execute provisioning as soon as the user import is completed, what type of job can be configured to achieve this?

- A. WSRetry job
- B. Single Threaded Job
- C. Multi threading job
- D. Trigger chain job

Answer: D

Explanation:

In Saviynt EIC, job orchestration and sequencing are critical for automating identity lifecycle processes such as user import followed by provisioning. To ensure that provisioning starts immediately after user import completes, Saviynt provides the concept of a Trigger Chain Job.

A Trigger Chain Job (Option B) allows administrators to define a sequence of jobs where one job is automatically triggered upon the successful completion of another. In this scenario, once the User Import Job finishes, the system can automatically trigger the Provisioning Job, ensuring seamless and immediate execution without manual intervention or time delays.

Option A (Multi-threading job) relates to performance optimization, not sequencing. Option C (Single Threaded Job) defines execution style but does not control job dependency. Option D (WSRetry job) is used for retrying failed web service calls, not for chaining processes.

Thus, Trigger Chain Jobs is the correct approach for automating dependent job execution and is widely used in Saviynt for efficient workflow orchestration.
