- B. Streaming data connectors.
- C. Batch data exporters.
- D. Identity stitching rules.

Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION # 14

A marketer is using Adobe Real-Time CDP and wants to exclude potential customers who have already made a purchase in the last 30 days from being targeted in an upcoming holiday discount campaign. What criterion would the marketer use to create the audience segment for the campaign?

- A. Segment all profiles who have completed a purchase in last 30 days
- B. Segment all profiles who have not completed a purchase in last 30 days
- C. Segment all profiles who have viewed a product in last 30 days
- D. Segment all profiles who have an order delivery status as pending

Answer: A

Explanation:

To effectively exclude a group from a campaign in Adobe Real-Time CDP, the marketer first needs to define the group they wish to suppress. The most efficient way to achieve this in the Segment Builder is to create an audience of "Recent Purchasers." By selecting the criterion "Segment all profiles who have completed a purchase in last 30 days" (Option C), the marketer creates a dynamic list of individuals who have triggered a commerce purchase event within the specified lookback window.

Once this "Recent Purchasers" segment is created, the marketer can then use it as an exclusion rule in the main campaign segment. For example, the campaign audience would be defined as: "All Customers" EXCLUDE

"Recent Purchasers." This approach is a standard best practice for optimizing marketing spend and preventing customer fatigue. Option A is incorrect because "not completed a purchase" is a negative lookback that is computationally more expensive and less precise than identifying a positive action for exclusion. Option B is irrelevant to the purchase history requirement. Option D would exclude browsers, not just purchasers, which would likely over-suppress the audience. By building a positive segment of those who have purchased, the marketer can reuse that segment for different purposes (such as a "Thank You" campaign) while simultaneously using it as a suppression list for the holiday discount.

NEW QUESTION # 15

A retail company wants to target customers who viewed a product category on their website within the last 24 hours. What type of segmentation should they use?

- A. Predictive Segmentation
- B. Static Segmentation
- C. Batch Segmentation
- D. Dynamic Segmentation
