ASET Ethics Examination-ASET Professional Practice Exam (PPE) Sample Questions (Q39-Q44):

NEW QUESTION # 39

Which of the following is the role of the ASET Practice Review Board?

- A. To oversee discipline hearings resulting from complaints against ASET members
- B. To review matters related to the professional competency of ASET members
- C. To investigate complaints received against ASET members
- D. To oversee appeal hearings resulting from the refusal of P.Tech. registration applications

Answer: B

Explanation:

Under the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act (EGPA), the Practice Review Board (PRB) holds a distinct and vital systemic role within ASET's regulatory framework. While the Investigative Committee handles specific allegations of misconduct (Option A) and the Discipline Committee conducts the subsequent hearings (Option C), the PRB is primarily focused on proactive quality assurance and general competency. Its statutory mandate is to inquire into and review matters related to the ongoing professional competency of ASET members. This includes evaluating the desirable standards of competence for the profession, overseeing the Continuing Professional Development (CPD) program, and conducting practice reviews or audits of members to ensure they are maintaining their skills. The PRB operates as the educational and standards-focused arm of the regulatory body, ensuring that the collective membership stays current with technological advancements and continues to possess the necessary skills to safeguard the public interest.

NEW QUESTION # 40

A regulated member receives tickets to a sports event from a client who is bidding on a project for the member's organization. The client assures the member that the tickets are a gift for their long-standing relationship and are not related to the current bidding process. Which of the following actions should the member take?

- A. Speak with the employer before deciding whether to accept or return the tickets.
- B. Return the tickets.
- C. Report the client's actions to ASET.
- D. Accept the tickets.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The ASET Code of Ethics requires members to act with absolute integrity and to avoid any situations that create a conflict of interest, whether actual or perceived. In the context of procurement and contract bidding, maintaining strict objectivity is critical. Accepting a gift of significant value (like sports tickets) from an active bidder completely compromises that objectivity. Even if the client insists the gift is purely for a "long-standing relationship" and the member believes they will not be influenced, the perception of bias to other bidders, the employer, and the public is highly damaging. It creates an appearance of bribery or favoritism. The ethical obligation here is clear and immediate: the member must politely but firmly return the tickets, citing their professional ethical obligations and corporate procurement policies regarding active bidding periods. Speaking with the employer (Option D) is unnecessary as the ethical standard prohibits acceptance regardless of corporate leniency, and reporting to ASET (Option C) is generally an overreaction unless it was an explicit, aggressive bribe.

NEW QUESTION # 41

One regulated member confides to another regulated member that he misrepresented himself on his resume to his present employer. In that resume, he asserted that he had been employed overseas for the last 12 months, when in fact he was unemployed. Which of the following statements best describes what, if anything, the other regulated member should do with this information?

- A. Ignore the information as any action could hurt the reputation of the member.
- B. Encourage the member to be honest with the employer and, if the member does not comply, report the member to ASET.
- C. Talk to the member directly and encourage the member to be honest with the employer.
- D. Encourage the member to be honest with the employer and, if the member does not comply, report the member to the employer.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The ASET Code of Ethics requires members to report hazardous, illegal, or unethical professional decisions or practices. Misrepresenting one's qualifications or employment history on a resume is a severe breach of professional integrity and constitutes unethical conduct, as it deceives the employer and potentially puts the public at risk if the individual lacks the required experience for a technical role. However, ethical guidelines generally encourage allowing the offending party the opportunity to correct their mistake first. The observing member should confront the colleague, explaining the ethical violation and strongly encouraging them to confess the misrepresentation to their employer. If the colleague refuses to take responsibility and correct the deception, the observing member has a paramount duty to protect the integrity of the profession. In this scenario, the correct escalation path is to report the unethical conduct to the professional regulatory body, ASET, rather than directly interfering with the employer. ASET has the legal authority and disciplinary mandate to investigate and penalize members for unethical behavior.

NEW QUESTION # 42

Which of the following statements best describes the purpose of a Code of Ethics?

- A. To define a high standard of professional conduct
- B. To regulate the profession
- C. To outline criteria for professional membership
- D. To establish governing principles

Answer: A

Explanation:

While provincial legislation (like the EGPA) legally regulates the profession and establishes criteria for membership, the specific purpose of a "Code of Ethics" is to define a high standard of professional conduct. A Code of Ethics goes beyond strict legal compliance; it establishes the moral and professional baseline expected of practitioners holding a protected designation. It serves as a behavioral compass, outlining how members ought to act with integrity, honesty, and fairness toward the public, their employers, their clients, and their peers. It translates abstract moral philosophy into practical, enforceable rules for daily engineering and technological practice. By adhering to this defined high standard, ASET members maintain the trust of the public—a trust that is absolutely necessary for the profession to retain its privilege of self-regulation. Therefore, while it is a regulatory tool, its core defining purpose is to explicitly state what constitutes ethical, competent, and highly professional behavior.

NEW QUESTION # 43

According to Part 5 of the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act, what does an "investigated person" mean?

- A. A member of the Investigative Committee
- B. A member under investigation
- C. A member of the Investigative Panel
- D. A complainant

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the context of the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act (EGPA) and the disciplinary processes of professional regulatory bodies in Alberta, specific legal terminology is utilized to define the roles of individuals involved in a complaint. According to Part 5 of the Act, which legally governs discipline, an "investigated person" is explicitly defined as a regulated member (or former member, or member-in-training) whose conduct is the subject of a formal complaint or an investigation. This specific term distinguishes the individual from the "complainant" (the person who filed the report), the investigators, and the members of the disciplinary boards. Using precise terminology is critical in legal and regulatory frameworks to ensure procedural fairness, natural justice, and clear communication throughout the investigative and disciplinary phases. When a complaint is submitted to the Registrar and forwarded for investigation, the member in question officially becomes the "investigated person," granting them specific legal rights, such as the right to legal counsel, the right to review gathered evidence, and the right to a fair hearing.
