NEW QUESTION # 66

In the administration console of the Cloud Identity Services, for which system type can you define both read and write transformations?

- A. Source systems
- B. Proxy systems
- C. Target systems

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the administration console of SAP Cloud Identity Services, both read and write transformations can be defined for Proxy systems. Proxy systems act as intermediaries between source and target systems, facilitating user provisioning and synchronization by transforming user attributes during data exchange. Read transformations modify data retrieved from the source system, while write transformations adjust data sent to the target system, ensuring compatibility and compliance with system requirements. This dual transformation capability is unique to proxy systems, as they handle bidirectional data flows. Source systems, which provide user data, typically support only read transformations to format outgoing data, while target systems, which receive data, support only write transformations to process incoming data. By enabling both transformation types, proxy systems offer flexibility in managing complex identity management scenarios, ensuring seamless integration across SAP and non-SAP systems while maintaining data integrity and security in cloud-based identity management.
