IIA Qualified Info Systems Auditor CIA Challenge Exam Sample Questions (Q54-Q59):

NEW QUESTION # 54

The internal audit activity is responsible for which of the following actions related to an organization's internal controls?

- A. Analyzing and advising regarding costs versus benefits of control activities.
- B. Attesting to fairness of financial statements
- C. Enabling opportunities affecting achievement of organizational objectives.
- D. Mitigating risks affecting achievement of organizational objectives.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Internal audit activities include evaluating the effectiveness and efficiency of internal controls, and part of this process involves analyzing and advising on the cost-benefit relationship of control activities.

This function helps ensure that the internal controls in place are not only effective in mitigating risks but are also economically justified.

NEW QUESTION # 55

Which of the following best describes the risk contained in an initial public offering for a new stock?

- A. Inherent risk.
- B. Underlying risk
- C. Net risk.
- D. Residual risk.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Introduction:

Inherent risk refers to the susceptibility of an assertion to a material misstatement, assuming no related controls.

IPO Risks:

Initial Public Offerings (IPOs) inherently carry a high level of risk due to the uncertainty and complexity involved in the process, the lack of historical data, and market volatility.

NEW QUESTION # 56

Which of the following would most likely be found in an organization that uses a decentralized organizational structure?

- A. There is a higher reliance on organizational culture
- B. There are electronic monitoring techniques employed
- C. There are clear expectations set for employees.
- D. There is a defined code for employee behavior

Answer: A

Explanation:

Decentralized Structure: In a decentralized organizational structure, decision-making authority is distributed throughout various levels of the organization. This often leads to a greater reliance on organizational culture to guide employees' actions and ensure alignment with the organization's goals and values.

NEW QUESTION # 57

An internal auditor is evaluating an organization's risk management framework.

Which of the following would provide the STRONGEST evidence that risk management is effective?

- A. Management performs annual risk assessments.
- B. Risk responses are aligned with organizational objectives and monitored.
- C. Risk registers are documented and approved.
- D. Risk policies have been communicated to employees.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Effective risk management requires more than documentation. Risks must be actively managed through appropriate responses and ongoing monitoring aligned with objectives.

NEW QUESTION # 58

Which of the following internal audit activities is performed in the design evaluation phase?

- A. The internal auditor reviews prior audits and workpapers
- B. The internal auditor checks a process for completeness.
- C. The internal auditor communicates the audit results to management
- D. The internal auditor identifies the controls over segregation of duties.

Answer: D

Explanation:

To determine which internal audit activity is performed in the design evaluation phase, it's essential to understand what each phase in the audit process entails. The design evaluation phase involves assessing whether the design of controls is adequate to mitigate risks to acceptable levels.

- * Option A: The internal auditor reviews prior audits and workpapers.
 - * This activity typically occurs during the planning phase of an audit. Reviewing prior audits and workpapers helps the auditor understand the scope, findings, and context of previous audits, providing valuable information for planning the current audit.
 - * Option B: The internal auditor identifies the controls over segregation of duties.
 - * Identifying controls, particularly those related to segregation of duties, is a key part of the design evaluation phase. In this phase, the auditor assesses whether the control design, including segregation of duties, is sufficient to prevent or detect errors and fraud.
 - * Option C: The internal auditor checks a process for completeness.
 - * Checking a process for completeness is more aligned with the testing phase, where the auditor evaluates the operational effectiveness of controls. During this phase, the auditor ensures that all parts of a process are functioning as intended.
 - * Option D: The internal auditor communicates the audit results to management.
 - * Communicating audit results occurs in the reporting phase, after the audit fieldwork is complete.
- In this phase, the auditor summarizes findings, conclusions, and recommendations and presents them to management.
