NEW QUESTION # 47
For which of the following documents is it possible to do forward and backward scheduling in the transportation cockpit?

- A. Freight unit
- B. Sales order
- C. Freight order
- D. Forwarding order

Answer: C

Explanation:
In SAP S/4HANA Transportation Management, forward and backward scheduling in the transportation cockpit is supported for thefreight order (A). According to the SAP documentation, freight orders, which represent the execution of transportation, allow planners to perform forward scheduling (calculating end dates based on start dates) and backward scheduling (calculating start dates based on required delivery dates) to optimize transport timelines. This functionality is available in the transportation cockpit to ensure alignment with transportation requirements and constraints.
The other options are incorrect:
* Forwarding order (B)is used for logistics service provider scenarios and does not typically support forward and backward scheduling in the transportation cockpit.
* Sales order (C)originates in sales and distribution and is not directly scheduled in the transportation cockpit.
* Freight unit (D)represents goods for planning but does not support scheduling at this level.
