What are different ways Product value can be depicted?

What are two ways to measure Product value?

Is releasing work the only way to deliver value? Why or why not?

Answer:

Explanation:

Two ways of describing Product Value:

1. Customer/user value - these are the benefits the customer/user will receive from the product. Solving customer pain points.
2. Business value - the benefits the business will receive from the product. Revenue, profit, employment, etc.

Two ways to measure product value:

1. Customer Usage Index
2. Product Cost Ratio

This means that the value the product delivers (internally and externally) is best determined by the market response of the product. Releasing to production will help you gather the most valuable feedback and information needed to help you determine what the current value is, determine the unrealized value, understand the team's ability to innovate, and manage the time to market.

For this question observe that there are 4 questions embedded in it and you required to answer each one. For this answer, it is explained the 2 different types of product value, for customer and business, and we also used EBM (Evidence-Based Management) Key Areas to sustain the value description and the answer

NEW QUESTION # 19

Give two examples of a Scrum Master helping the Product Owner.
Give two examples of a Scrum Master hindering the Product Owner.

Answer:

Explanation:

Scrum Master helps the Product Owner:

- 1) When the Product Owner is new to the role or transitioning from a traditional waterfall process, the Scrum Master helps the Product Owner understand the value of empiricism and moving his/her focus from the process and more towards the outcomes of the work being done. The Scrum Master works with the Product Owner to find the right tools that will help the Product Owner effectively measure the impact of the releases and how to base future decisions on the outcomes
 - 2) The Scrum Master helps the Product Owner find ways of effectively managing the Product Backlog. For example, mapping items to identify dependencies between work items, just in time development to reduce waste Scrum Mater impeding the Product Owner:
 - 1) Scrum Master dictating how the Product Owner should order the Product Backlog items rather than coaching and allowing the Product Owner to take ownership of the Product Backlog
 - 2) Scrum Master not addressing conflicts between the Scrum Team members and Product Owner leads to division between team members. For example, arguments that result from people not actively listening or not trying to understand others perspectives
- For this answer, you can use your own experience to described and also consult the Scrum guide to help you inspect how the Scrum Master might help or not the Product Owner.
