Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 139

You want to manage a FortiGate with the FortiCloud service. The FortiGate shows up in your list of devices on the FortiCloud Web site, but all management functions are either missing or grayed out.

Which statement is correct in this scenario?

- A. You must manually configure system central-management on the FortiGate CLI and set the management type to fortiguard.
- B. The managed FortiGate is running a version of FortiOS that is either too new or too old for FortiCloud.
- C. The managed FortiGate requires that a FortiCloud management license be purchased and applied.
- D. The management tunnel mode on the managed FortiGate must be changed to normal.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 140

Refer to the exhibit. A FortiWeb appliance is configured for load balancing web sessions to internal web servers. The Server Pool is configured as shown in the exhibit.

How will the sessions be load balanced between server 1 and server 2 during normal operation?

- A. Server 1 will receive 20% of the sessions, Server 2 will receive 66.6% of the sessions
- B. Server 1 will receive 33.3% of the sessions, Server 2 will receive 66.6% of the sessions
- C. Server 1 will receive 0% of the sessions, Server 2 will receive 100% of the sessions
- D. Server 1 will receive 25% of the sessions, Server 2 will receive 75% of the sessions

Answer: B

Explanation:

FortiWeb only routes connections for the pool to a backup server when all the other members of the server pool fail their server health check.

The backup server mechanism does not work if you do not specify server health checks for the pool members.
