NEW QUESTION # 72

Which statement BEST describes the purpose of AutoSupport in a NetApp environment?

- A. It disables failed disks remotely
- B. It provides automated telemetry and support diagnostics
- C. It encrypts aggregates automatically
- D. It manages Active IQ licensing

Answer: B

Explanation:

NetApp AutoSupport automatically collects and sends health, performance, and diagnostic information to support systems. This accelerates issue resolution and proactive maintenance.

AutoSupport does not perform encryption management, disk disabling, or licensing control functions directly.

NEW QUESTION # 73

Which type of AutoSupport message would you expect to see triggered automatically when ONTAP software detects a NetApp WAFL inconsistency on an aggregate?

- A. WAFL INCONSISTENT USER DATA BLOCK
- B. CHECKSUM ERROR
- C. MEDIUM ERROR DURING RECONSTRUCTION
- D. WAFL INCONSISTENT BLOCK

Answer: D

Explanation:

When ONTAP detects a WAFL inconsistency in an aggregate, it automatically generates an AutoSupport message with the description WAFL INCONSISTENT BLOCK.

Key Details:

WAFL INCONSISTENT BLOCK:

This error indicates that WAFL metadata or user data blocks have been found to be inconsistent.

ONTAP triggers an automatic AutoSupport message to notify administrators and NetApp Support.

NEW QUESTION # 74

During which two operations is the NVRAM replayed by the high-availability (HA) partner?
(Choose two.)

- A. during a negotiated takeover
- B. when a node is halted
- C. after triggering a sync core
- D. when the node loses power

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

1. During a Negotiated Takeover:

Description:

When a negotiated takeover occurs (e.g., for maintenance or upgrades), NVRAM data is replayed by the HA partner to ensure no data is lost.

Relevance:

This ensures that all pending writes are safely processed by the partner node.

2. When the Node Loses Power:

Description:

If a node loses power unexpectedly, the HA partner replays the mirrored NVRAM data to protect active write operations.

NEW QUESTION # 75

A customer observes that one node repeatedly enters takeover mode due to thermal alarms.
Which FRU should be inspected FIRST?

- A. Power cable labels
- B. Cluster passwords
- C. Cooling fans and airflow obstructions
- D. Shelf serial numbers

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 76

A customer accidentally removes the incorrect disk during a maintenance procedure on a RAID-DP aggregate. Which outcome is

MOST likely if another disk fails before reconstruction completes?

- A. Immediate node reboot
- B. Automatic aggregate encryption
- C. Shelf firmware corruption
- D. Aggregate degradation with potential data loss risk

Answer: D

Explanation:

RAID-DP tolerates two disk failures, but removing the wrong disk increases risk exposure significantly. If another disk fails before reconstruction finishes, aggregate degradation or possible data unavailability can occur. Firmware corruption and automatic encryption are unrelated. Proper disk identification procedures are critical during maintenance activities.
