Antwort: C

212. Frage
Preoperative diagnosis: Right thigh benign congenital hairy nevus. *1
Postoperative diagnosis: Right thigh benign congenital hairy 0 nevus.
Operation performed: Excision of right thigh benign congenital>1 nevus, excision size with margins 4.5 cm and closure size 5 cm.
Anesthesia: General.0
Intraoperative antibiotics: Ancef.0
Indications: The patient is a 5-year-old girl who presented with her parents for evaluation of her right thigh congenital nevus. It has been followed by pediatrics and thought to have changed over the past year. Family requested excision. They understood the risks involved, which included but were not limited to risks of general anesthesia, infection, bleeding, wound dehiscence, and poor scar formation. They understood the scar would likely widen as the child grows because of the location of it and because of the age of the patient. They consented to proceed.
Description of procedure: The patient was seen preoperatively in > I the holding area, identified, and then brought to the operating room. Once adequate general anesthesia had been induced, the patient's right thigh was prepped and draped in standard surgical fashion. An elliptical excision measuring 6 x 1.8 cm had been marked. This was injected with Lidocaine with epinephrine, total of 6

cc of 1% with 1:100,000. After an adequate amount of time, a #15 blade was used to sharply excise this full thickness. This was passed to pathology for review. The wound required # limited undermining in the deep subcutaneous plane on both sides for approximately 1.5 cm in order to allow mobilization of the skin for closure. The skin was then closed in a layered fashion using 3-0 Vicryl on the dermis and then 4-0 Monocryl running subcuticular in the skin, the wound was cleaned and dressed with Dermabond and Steri-Strips.

The patient was then cleaned and turned over to anesthesia for S extubation.

She was extubated successfully in the operating room and taken S to the recovery room in stable condition.

There were no complications.

What E/M coding is reported?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Antwort: B

Begründung:
Emergency department visit with high severity
99285 = High complexity ED E/M

213. Frage

(Patient presents to the office for the removal of 15 actinic keratoseslesions. The provider destroys these lesions with laser surgery. What CPT coding is reported for this visit?)

- A. 0
- B. 17110, 17111
- C. 1
- D. 17000, 17003

Antwort: A

Begründung:
Actinic keratoses (AKs) are coded using the premalignant lesion destruction CPT family 17000-17004, regardless of the destruction method (e.g., laser, cryotherapy, electrosurgery), as long as the intent is destruction. Coding is based on the number of lesions treated in that session: 17000 covers the first lesion, 17003 is an add-on code for 2-14 additional lesions, and 17004 is used when treating 15 or more lesions.
Because the encounter documents destruction of 15 AK lesions, CPT requires reporting 17004 only (not 17000
+ multiple units of 17003). Codes 17110/17111 are for destruction of benign lesions (e.g., warts, molluscum), which is the wrong lesion category. On CPC exams, the key is matching premalignant vs benign and then selecting the correct code by lesion count threshold-here the threshold is met for 17004.
