Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 18

Which of the following is the starting point for planning activities?

- A. Hold a public meeting with representatives of the electric utility, local business leaders, local environmentalists, and community leaders
- B. Brainstorm until the planner has intuitively arrived at a list they believe to be workable
- C. Research information about the experiences of communities that have had similar situations and opportunities
- D. Find out how the locality responded to situations and opportunities of a distinctly different nature in the past

Answer: C

Explanation:

The starting point for planning activities is to gather relevant background information to inform the process, ensuring that plans are based on evidence and best practices. Option C (researching experiences of similar communities) provides a foundation by learning from comparable situations, which helps identify strategies, challenges, and opportunities. The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline (2022), under

"Fundamental Planning Knowledge," states, "The planning process begins with research, including studying the experiences of other communities with similar issues, to establish a baseline for planning." Option A (brainstorming intuitively) lacks a research basis and risks being uninformed. Option B (past local responses to different situations) is less relevant than studying similar situations elsewhere. Option D (public meeting) is a later step for engagement, not the starting point. The CPC Study Manual (2024) notes,

"Planning begins with researching how other communities have addressed similar challenges to inform the process," supporting option C.
