NEW QUESTION # 119

Which technique can be used with Lightning web components to expose them outside of an org in another web container?

- A. Lightning Canvas
- B. Slot elements

- C. Heroku
- D. Lightning Out

Answer: D

Explanation:

According to the Lightning Web Components Developer Guide, Lightning Out is a technique that allows developers to run Lightning web components outside of Salesforce servers, such as in a Node.js app running on Heroku or a department server inside the firewall. Lightning Out uses a script tag to load the Lightning web components framework and the custom components into the web container. Lightning Out also handles authentication, event handling, and data access between the web container and the Salesforce org. Slot elements, Heroku, and Lightning Canvas are not techniques for exposing Lightning web components outside of an org in another web container. #### NEW QUESTION # 120

Which wire adapter should a developer use to retrieve metadata about a specific picklist?

- A. getPicklistMetadataValues
- B. getPicklist
- C. getPicklistMetadata
- D. getPicklistValues

Answer: D

Explanation:

The developer should use the getPicklistValues wire adapter to retrieve metadata about a specific picklist. This wire adapter allows the developer to get the picklist values for a specified field on a given object and record type. The wire adapter returns an object that contains the picklist values, the default value, and the controlling field (if any). The developer can use this wire adapter to populate a custom picklist component with the appropriate values based on the object and record type context. The other options are incorrect because they are not valid wire adapters for retrieving picklist metadata. getPicklistValues, Retrieving Picklist Values Without Using Apex, B2B Commerce and D2C Commerce Developer Guide

Which Salesforce B2B Commerce object needs to have a record added when defining a new Subscriber Pages to be rendered in a CC Page?

- A. CC Admin
- B. CC Subscriber Pages
- C. CC Storefront Association
- D. CC Page Sections

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Salesforce B2B Commerce object that needs to have a record added when defining a new Subscriber Page to be rendered in a CC Page is CC Subscriber Pages. This is a custom object that stores information about the Subscriber Pages, such as the name, description, URL, and Visualforce page. To create a new Subscriber Page, the user needs to create a new record in this object and specify the required fields. The user can then select the Subscriber Page from the CC Page Settings configuration in CC Admin. Salesforce B2B Commerce and D2C Commerce Developer Guide, Subscriber Pages

NEW QUESTION # 122

How can the display of CC Menu Items be customized for different users?

- A. cc_hk_Menu extension to pre-process which menu items are cached
- B. cc_hk_Category extension to pre-process which category items are cached as menu items
- C. cc_hk_Menu extension to post-process any cached menu items
- D. cc_hk_Category extension to post-process any cached menu items

Answer: C

Explanation:

The display of CC Menu Items can be customized for different users by using the cc_hk_Menu extension to post-process any cached menu items. This extension allows modifying the menu items based on the user context, such as the user role, account, or cart. #### NEW QUESTION # 123

Which two aspects are applicable to Page Includes? (2 answers)

- A. Page Includes must be assigned to an OOTB Page, i.e. Home, Product Detail, etc., and enabled
- B. If a controller is used for an included page, then a merge variable must be present on the page.
- C. Page Includes can be configured as Body Includes Begin.
- D. Standard Visualforce controls such as apex:form should not be used within a page include

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Two aspects that are applicable to Page Includes are:

Standard Visualforce controls such as apex:form should not be used within a page include. This is because the page include is rendered inside an existing Visualforce page that already has a form element. Using another form element inside the page include will cause conflicts and errors. Instead, the page include should use HTML elements or custom components that do not require a form element.

Page Includes can be configured as Body Includes Begin. This means that the page include will be rendered at the beginning of the body section of the page, before any other content or widgets. This can be useful for adding some custom content or functionality that applies to the whole page, such as a banner, a modal, or a script.
