NEW QUESTION # 99

A technician reported that the travel time calculated between appointments is often too short because of job delays throughout the day. Which setting should a consultant consider to improve travel time accuracy?

- A. Estimated travel time, minimize travel
- B. Street level routing, Default travel speed
- C. Travel speed unit, actual travel time
- D. Minimum grade, default operating hour

Answer: B

Explanation:

Street Level Routing is a feature that calculates travel time between service appointments based on actual road distance and traffic conditions[131]. Default Travel Speed is a setting that defines the average speed of resources when traveling between service appointments[132]. Using Street Level Routing and Default Travel Speed would allow improving travel time accuracy by taking into account real-time road conditions and resource speed. Minimum Grade, Default Operating Hour would not affect travel time accuracy. Minimum Grade is a setting that defines the minimum skill level required for resources to be matched with service appointments[133]. Default OperatingHour is a record that defines the default working hours for resources [134]. Estimated Travel Time, Minimize Travel would not affect travel time accuracy. Estimated Travel Time is a field on the service appointment object that shows the expected travel time for the assigned resource[135].

Minimize Travel is an optimization criterion that prioritizes reducing travel time when scheduling service appointments[136]. Travel Speed Unit, Actual Travel Time would not affect travel time accuracy. Travel Speed Unit is a setting that defines the unit of measurement for travel speed such as miles per hour or kilometers per hour[137]. Actual Travel Time is a field on the service appointment object that shows the actual travel time recorded by the resource[138]. References:
