APICS Certified in Planning and Inventory Management (CPIM 8.0) Sample Questions (Q374-Q379):

NEW QUESTION # 374

Which of the following prioritization rules will have the greatest impact In reducing the number of orders In queue?

- A. First come, first served
- B. Critical ratio
- C. Shortest processing time
- D. Fewest operations remaining

Answer: C

Explanation:

The shortest processing time rule is a prioritization rule that assigns the highest priority to the job that requires the least amount of processing time. This rule minimizes the average flow time of jobs and reduces the number of jobs in queue. The critical ratio rule assigns priority based on the ratio of time remaining until the due date to the remaining processing time. The fewest operations remaining rule assigns priority based on the number of remaining operations for each job. The first come, first served rule assigns priority based on the arrival time of the jobs. References: Managing Supply Chain Operations, Chapter 9: Scheduling and Sequencing, page 237. NEW QUESTION # 375

An order winner during the growth stage of a product's life cycle is:

- A. availability.
- B. dependability.
- C. variety.
- D. price.

Answer: C

Explanation:

An order winner is a product attribute that influences customers to choose one product over another. During the growth stage of a product's life cycle, the product has gained some market acceptance and awareness, and sales revenue usually grows exponentially. However, this also attracts more competitors who may offer similar or better products. Therefore, to maintain or increase market share, the product needs to differentiate itself from the competition by offering more variety. Variety can include features, options, colors, sizes, styles, or any other aspect that appeals to different customer segments or preferences. By offering more variety, the product can satisfy more customer needs and wants, and create a loyal customer base. Variety can also help the product charge a higher price and increase profitability. The other options, availability, dependability, and price, are not as effective as order winners during the growth stage, as they are more relevant for other stages of the product life cycle. Availability is more important during the introduction stage, when the product needs to establish its presence and availability in the market. Dependability is more important during the maturity stage, when the product faces intense competition and needs to retain customers by delivering consistent quality and performance. Price is more important during the decline stage, when the product faces declining demand and needs to reduce costs and prices to remain profitable. References:

- A. Automated
- B. Rule-based
- C. Mandatory
- D. Role-based

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 378

In preparing for a facility location decision, proximity to suppliers would be classified as which kind of criteria?

- A. Service level requirements
- B. Future flexibility factors
- C. Cost factors
- D. Access to transportation

Answer: C

Explanation:

Proximity to suppliers would be classified as a cost factor in preparing for a facility location decision. Cost factors are the expenses associated with operating a facility in a specific location, such as labor, materials, utilities, taxes, and transportation. Proximity to suppliers can affect the cost of inbound transportation, inventory holding, and quality control. Choosing a location that is close to suppliers can reduce these costs and improve the efficiency and reliability of the supply chain. Reference:
