NEW QUESTION # 549

A company with critical resources in the cloud needs to ensure data is available in multiple datacenters around the world. Which of the following BEST meets the company's needs?

- A. Geo-redundancy
- B. Auto-scaling
- C. High availability
- D. Disaster recovery

Answer: A

Explanation:

Geo-redundancy is the best option for a company that needs to ensure data availability in multiple datacenters around the world.

Geo-redundancy is the duplication of IT infrastructure and data across geographically dispersed locations, such as different regions or continents<sup>1</sup>. Geo-redundancy provides several benefits for cloud-based applications, such as:

High availability: Geo-redundancy can improve the availability of cloud services by reducing the impact of regional outages, disasters, or network failures. If one datacenter becomes unavailable, the application can switch to another datacenter that has a copy of the data and continue to operate<sup>2</sup>.

Performance: Geo-redundancy can enhance the performance of cloud services by reducing the latency and bandwidth consumption for users who are located far from the primary datacenter. By having datacenters closer to the users, the application can deliver faster and more consistent responses<sup>3</sup>.

Compliance: Geo-redundancy can help the company comply with regulatory or legal requirements that mandate data sovereignty or data protection. By having datacenters in different jurisdictions, the company can store and process data according to the local laws and regulations<sup>4</sup>.

The other options are not as suitable as geo-redundancy for the company's needs because:

Auto-scaling: Auto-scaling is the ability of cloud services to automatically adjust the amount of resources allocated to an application based on the demand and workload. Auto-scaling can improve the scalability and cost-efficiency of cloud services, but it does not guarantee data availability in multiple datacenters.

Disaster recovery: Disaster recovery is the process of restoring the normal operation of an application after a disruption or failure. Disaster recovery can involve backup, restore, and failover mechanisms, but it does not necessarily require data replication across multiple datacenters.

High availability: High availability is the degree to which an application can operate without interruption or downtime. High availability can be achieved by using redundant components, load balancing, and fault tolerance techniques, but it does not imply data distribution across multiple datacenters.
