Acquia Certified Drupal Site Builder Exam for Drupal 10, 11 Sample Questions (Q11-Q16):

NEW QUESTION # 11

While building a new site, you are working with the default frontend theme. You have placed custom blocks in available regions. After some time, you decide to install a new contributed theme, and set it as the default for the site.

After switching to the new theme, you notice that many of your blocks have disappeared!

What is the likely reason for this?

- A. The blocks have not yet been registered with the new theme.
- B. The new theme only allows system blocks, not custom blocks.
- C. The new theme's regions have different names from the regions in the old theme. Those blocks have been disabled.

- D. The blocks were built in such a way that they are not compatible with the new theme. They need to be re-created.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Drupal 10 and Drupal 11, block placement is defined per theme . The Block Layout documentation explains that when placing a block, you are assigning it to a region in a specific theme , not globally for all themes. So when you switch the site's default theme, the new theme may have a different set of regions or different region names, and block placements from the previous theme may no longer map correctly.

Drupal's theming documentation is even more explicit: if a theme does not define a region that blocks were assigned to, those blocks are treated as assigned to an invalid region and are disabled . The Block module documentation also states that disabled blocks (blocks not assigned to any region in your theme) are never shown . This is exactly why blocks can appear to "disappear" after changing themes.

The other options do not match Drupal's documented behavior. Blocks do not need to be "registered" with a theme in this sense, contributed themes are not limited to system blocks, and custom blocks generally do not need to be recreated just because the theme changed. The issue is the theme-specific region mapping , which makes D the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 12

You are using a contributed module named Lotus. You have read the module's documentation and ensured it is configured correctly. However, certain functionality of the module is not working as intended.

How should you find help?

(Select 2 options)

- A. Create a comment of type "support request" on the module's project page.
- B. Search for answers and ask questions in the module's issue queue on drupal.org.
- C. Ask questions in the drupal-support channel on IRC or in the support channel on Drupal Slack group.
- D. Email the module's maintainer and ask for help.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Drupal 10 and Drupal 11 documentation strongly recommend using community-supported channels for troubleshooting contributed modules. The primary and most appropriate place to seek help is the module's issue queue on drupal.org , where users can search for existing issues, report bugs, and ask questions. This ensures transparency, allows maintainers and contributors to track problems, and benefits the wider community. Therefore, option A is correct.

Additionally, Drupal has active community communication platforms such as Drupal Slack and IRC channels (like #drupal-support), where developers and site builders collaborate and provide real-time assistance. These are officially recognized community support channels, making option B correct.

Option C is incorrect because Drupal project pages do not use general comments for support; instead, all discussions should happen in the issue queue. Option D is discouraged because directly emailing maintainers bypasses the public support process and is not aligned with Drupal community best practices.

Thus, the correct and recommended ways to find help are using the issue queue and community support channels.

NEW QUESTION # 13

Your website is showing a warning message that a contributed module "Password Policy" has a new security update.

What action will you take?

- A. Download the latest version of the module. And visit the update.php page to complete the update.
- B. Uninstall the currently installed module. Download the latest version of the module and configure it again.
- C. No action is needed as security updates are not important.
- D. Drupal will update and install security update automatically on the next cron run.

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Drupal 10 and Drupal 11, security updates for contributed modules must be applied promptly to protect the site from known vulnerabilities. Drupal core provides a built-in Update Manager module that notifies administrators when updates, especially security releases, are available. However, Drupal does not automatically install updates , including during cron runs, so option C is incorrect. The correct process, as documented in Drupal's official update procedures, involves downloading the latest recommended release of the module (typically via Composer or manual replacement), and then running database updates using the /update.php script or drush updb . This ensures that any schema changes required by the new version are properly applied. Option B is incorrect because uninstalling a module is unnecessary and can lead to data loss or configuration issues. Option A is clearly wrong, as ignoring security updates exposes the site to risks. Therefore, the proper and documented approach is to update the module codebase and run update.php to finalize the update process, making option D the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 14

A new customer has asked, why a Drupal-based website will be more flexible over a custom developed website. Which THREE Drupal features would you explain to the customer?

- A. Drupal allows you to directly rename database columns from the UI.
- B. Drupal.org has an online store where you can purchase modules and themes.
- C. Drupal can be used as a headless CMS out of the box.
- D. Drupal provides comprehensive content modeling and listing of content using UI.
- E. Drupal has a comprehensive and feature rich administrative UI out of the box.

Answer: C,D,E

Explanation:

Drupal 10 and Drupal 11 are flexible because they provide major site-building capabilities through configuration and core modules, instead of requiring everything to be custom-coded. Drupal supports headless /decoupled use cases out of the box through core web services such as JSON:API , which Drupal documentation describes as a standard way to expose site content for decoupled applications. That makes A correct.

Drupal also provides strong content modeling through entity types and fields, and it supports listing and displaying content through the Views UI . The User Guide and core documentation explain that site builders can define structured content types and then create listings, pages, blocks, sorting, and filtering through Views without writing custom code. That makes B correct.

Drupal additionally ships with a rich administrative interface for installing modules, managing themes, creating content types, editing fields, configuring permissions, and administering content. This is one of the platform's core strengths compared with a purely custom-built system, so E is correct.

Options C and D are not correct. Drupal.org provides contributed projects, but not an online store for buying modules and themes, and Drupal does not present direct database-column renaming as a normal UI-based site- building feature.

NEW QUESTION # 15

You have a content type "Places" which lists tourist destinations of different countries. You would like the visitors to be able to mark their country while commenting on "Places". This does not apply to other content types.

How will you build this functionality?

- A. Obtain country information from the user profile field while adding comments.
- B. Create a new comment type with a new field "Country" and associate it with Places content type.
- C. Use the GeoIP module to tag users with their locations.
- D. Create a "Country" vocabulary and add a term reference field to "Places" content type.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Drupal's Comment module supports creating different comment types and attaching them to content entities.

The official Comment module documentation states that Drupal can create new comment types that can be attached to content entities, and the detailed comment documentation explains that when you create a comment type and choose the target entity type as Content , that comment type becomes available when adding a comment field to a content type.

Drupal's field documentation also explains that fields on comments are defined at the content-type level , on the Comment fields tab of the content type edit page. When you add a field for comments, each comment on content items of that type gets that field. Drupal even gives an example of adding a field to comments for one content type but not another, which matches this requirement exactly.

So the right solution is to create a new comment type for Places comments, add a Country field to that comment type, and then use that comment type on the Places content type only. The other options either store the data in the wrong place or do not make it specific to comments on Places.
