NEW QUESTION # 1188

Write Once, Read Many (WORM) data storage devices are designed to BEST support which of the following core security concepts?

- A. Confidentiality
- B. Scalability
- C. Availability
- D. Integrity

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 1189

Which of the following authorization standards is built to handle Application programming Interface (API) access for federated Identity management (FIM)?

- A. Terminal Access Controller Access Control System Plus (TACACS+)
- B. Remote Authentication Dial-In User Service (RADIUS)
- C. Open Authentication (OAuth)
- D. Security Assertion Markup Language (SAML)

Answer: C

Explanation:

OAuth is an authorization standard that is built to handle API access for federated identity management.

OAuth allows a user to grant a third-party application limited access to their resources on another service provider, without revealing their credentials or identity. For example, a user can use OAuth to allow a social media app to access their photos on a cloud storage service, without giving the app their username and password for the cloud service. OAuth uses tokens to represent the user's authorization and identity, which can be revoked at any time by the user. References: CISSP All-in-One Exam Guide, Eighth Edition, Chapter 5:

NEW QUESTION # 1190

The number of violations that will be accepted or forgiven before a violation record is produced is called which of the following?

- A. logging level
- B. forgiveness level
- C. clipping level
- D. acceptance level

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is "clipping level". This is the point at which a system decides to take some sort of action when an action repeats a preset number of times. That action may be to log the activity, lock a user account, temporarily close a port, etc.

Example: The most classic example of a clipping level is failed login attempts. If you have a system configured to lock a user's account after three failed login attempts, that is the "clipping level".

The other answers are not correct because:

Acceptance level, forgiveness level, and logging level are nonsensical terms that do not exist (to my knowledge) within network security.

Reference:

Official ISC2 Guide - The term "clipping level" is not in the glossary or index of that book. I cannot find it in the text either. However, I'm quite certain that it would be considered part of the CBK, despite its exclusion from the Official Guide.
