VMware Cloud Foundation 9.0 Architect Sample Questions (Q55-Q60):

NEW QUESTION # 55
An architect is responsible for designing a new VMware Cloud Foundation (VCF)-based Private Cloud solution. During the requirements gathering workshop with key customer stakeholders, the following information was captured:
* The solution must support the monitoring of up to 10,000 objects.
* The solution must support 24 months retention for all monitoring data.
When creating the design document, which design quality should be used to classify the stated requirements?

- A. Availability
- B. Manageability
- C. Recoverability
- D. Performance

Answer: B

Explanation:
The VMware Cloud Foundation 9.0.1 Design Guide defines Manageability as the design quality that focuses on monitoring, configuration, reporting, and operational management capabilities. It states:
"Manageability encompasses the ability to monitor, configure, and control the solution effectively, ensuring operational insights and compliance with business objectives." The requirement to support 10,000 monitored objects and retain monitoring data for 24 months directly relates to the system's ability to manage and retain operational metrics, not to its performance or availability. These parameters ensure long-term visibility, compliance, and data analytics consistency-core elements of Manageability.
In contrast:
* Performance focuses on throughput and latency.
* Availability ensures uptime and fault tolerance.
* Recoverability deals with restoration after failure.
Therefore, the classification of these requirements falls under Manageability, as they directly define how the system manages and retains monitoring data.

NEW QUESTION # 56
The following requirements were identified in an architecture workshop for a VMware Cloud Foundation (VCF) design project using vSAN as the primary storage solution:
REQ001: The application must maintain a minimum of 1,000 transactions per second (TPS) during business hours, excluding disaster recovery (DR) scenarios.
REQ002: Automatic DRS and HA must be utilized.
REQ003: Planned maintenance must be performed outside of business hours.
While monitoring the TPS of the application, which of the following is NOT a valid test case to validate these requirements?

- A. Trigger a vSphere High Availability (HA) failover activity.
- B. Trigger a vCenter upgrade workflow.
- C. Trigger a vSAN disk group cache drive failure.
- D. Trigger fully automatic DRS vMotion activity.

Answer: B

Explanation:
The test case must validate all three requirements: maintaining 1,000 TPS during business hours (REQ001), using automatic DRS and HA (REQ002), and ensuring maintenance occurs outside business hours (REQ003, implying minimal disruption during business hours).

Let's assess each:

Option A: Trigger a vSphere High Availability (HA) failover activity

HA failover (e.g., host failure) tests automatic VM restarts (REQ002) and ensures TPS (REQ001) remains at 1,000 during business hours under failure conditions (excluding DR, as this is intra-site). The VCF 5.2 Administration Guide recommends HA testing to validate availability, making this valid.

Option B: Trigger a vSAN disk group cache drive failure

A cache drive failure in vSAN tests data resilience and HA's ability to restart VMs if needed (REQ002), while monitoring TPS (REQ001) during business hours. The vSAN Administration Guide supports this as a standard test for vSAN performance and recovery, aligning with the requirements.

Option C: Trigger fully automatic DRS vMotion activity

Fully automatic DRS triggers vMotion to balance loads (REQ002), testing TPS (REQ001) during business hours without disruption. While not maintenance, it validates DRS automation's impact on performance, per the vSphere Resource Management Guide, making it a valid test.

Option D: Trigger a vCenter upgrade workflow

A vCenter upgrade is a planned maintenance activity (REQ003) that should occur outside business hours. Performing it during business hours to monitor TPS contradicts REQ003 and isn't a typical test for DRS/HA (REQ002) or application performance (REQ001), as it affects management, not workloads directly. The VCF 5.2 Administration Guide treats upgrades as separate from runtime validation.

Conclusion:

Option D is not a valid test case, as it violates REQ003 and doesn't directly validate REQ001 or REQ002 in a runtime context.
