dbt Labs dbt Analytics Engineering Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q194-Q199):

NEW QUESTION # 194

You're working with a model that aggregates data across many countries. Which assumption about the data might be especially important to test for and handle in your model logic?

- A. Encoding formats (UTF-8, etc.) may be inconsistent across source systems.
- B. Time zones and daylight savings rules for timestamps could differ between data sources.
- C. The presence of unexpected HTML tags within textual data fields.
- D. Different regions may use varying currency exchange rates.

Answer: A,B,D

Explanation:

Each of these introduces unique challenges for aggregating data globally. While D can be an issue, it's less central to this specific scenario.

NEW QUESTION # 195

Regular test runs reveal inconsistent and intermittent test failures, despite no obvious changes to models or source data. What debugging strategies might you use?

- A. Use dbt's logging feature to add detailed output to the test execution.
- B. Examine data warehouse performance metrics for resource constraints during test runs.
- C. Temporarily switch to a more consistent testing environment.
- D. Consider if external dependencies used within dbt tests are themselves unstable.

Answer: A,B,D

Explanation:

Each helps track down potential causes of non-deterministic test behavior. D might be too drastic early on.

NEW QUESTION # 196

You're refactoring a dbt project with circular dependencies (e.g., Model A references Model B, which references Model A). Select the most appropriate strategy:

- A. Add the -full-refresh flag to dbt run to force execution.
- B. Create snapshots to break the dependency chain.
- C. Rewrite SQL logic to remove the circular references.
- D. Introduce a redundant intermediate model to resolve the circularity.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Circular dependencies are a fundamental design flaw. 'Snapshots' and -full-refresh are workarounds. Introducing redundant models creates maintenance overhead.

NEW QUESTION # 197

A source table is updated with a full overwrite every night. Your dbt job fails due to freshness checks. What's a likely cause and solution?

- A. The source uses an incremental materialization. Change it to a 'table'.
- B. You need to schedule the dbt job to run after the nightly update.
- C. The freshness check is misconfigured- Adjust the count and period settings.
- D. The loaded_at field is absent. Add the corresponding column or remove the check-

Answer: C

Explanation:

Freshness checks designed for incremental updates might fail with full overwrites. Other solutions might be needed in specific scenarios but aligning the check is the first step.

NEW QUESTION # 198

You create tests to validate counts and timestamps against a baseline dataset. The tests fail unexpectedly. What might be possible root causes?

- A. There are differences in data types or time zone handling between the model and baseline.
- B. The baseline dataset itself has become corrupted
- C. Your tests are too strict and need more generous tolerances.
- D. Your upstream ETL process has a logic error, leading to incorrect data.

Answer: A,B,C,D

Explanation:

Each scenario could cause a baseline comparison test to fail, covering issues in the data pipeline, the baseline, and the test logic itself.
