NEW QUESTION # 147

_____ are those criteria, usually stated in a contract and/or statement of work, that include deliverables, performance requirements, and essential conditions which must be met to complete project deliverables and be accepted.

- A. Earned value methods
- B. Deliverable milestones
- C. Acceptance criteria
- D. Performance standards

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is D (Acceptance criteria) because, within the NCMA Contract Management Body of Knowledge (CMBOK), acceptance criteria are the specific conditions and requirements that must be satisfied for deliverables to be formally accepted by the buyer. These criteria are typically defined in the contract and /or Statement of Work (SOW) and serve as the benchmark for evaluating whether contractual obligations have been successfully fulfilled.

Acceptance criteria include clearly defined performance requirements, quality standards, deliverable specifications, and measurable outcomes . They ensure that both parties have a mutual understanding of what constitutes successful completion of the work. This reduces ambiguity, minimizes disputes, and supports objective evaluation during contract performance and closeout.

Option A (performance standards) refers to general expectations of quality or performance but does not necessarily define the formal conditions for acceptance. Option B (deliverable milestones) identifies key points in the schedule but does not specify acceptance requirements. Option C (earned value methods) relates to performance measurement, not acceptance conditions.

In the CMBOK post-award phase, acceptance criteria are critical for inspection, verification, and acceptance processes , ensuring that deliverables meet contractual expectations before payment or project closure.

Properly defined acceptance criteria enhance accountability, improve quality assurance, and contribute to successful contract outcomes.

NEW QUESTION # 148

Contract management competency is a direct measurement of the manager's ability to continuously learn and apply leadership, management, and technical competencies as _____.

- A. processes that are optional but encouraged
- B. a single, integrated process
- C. situational processes
- D. individual processes

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is B because NCMA CMBOK defines contract management competency as the ability to integrate leadership, management, and technical competencies into a cohesive and unified approach .

These competencies are not intended to function independently or as isolated activities; rather, they must be applied together as a single, integrated process to effectively manage contracts across the entire lifecycle.

CMBOK emphasizes that successful contract managers continuously develop and apply these competencies in a holistic manner , ensuring alignment between strategic objectives, operational execution, and technical requirements. The integration of competencies allows contract managers to adapt to complex environments, make informed decisions, and ensure that contractual outcomes meet organizational goals.

Option A is incorrect because competencies are not optional-they are essential for effective contract management. Option C is incorrect because treating competencies as individual processes would create silos and reduce effectiveness. Option D is partially relevant in that competencies may be applied based on context, but CMBOK specifically stresses integration rather than situational separation.

Thus, consistent with the Learn domain in CMBOK, contract management competency is demonstrated through the continuous and integrated application of leadership, management, and technical skills, making B the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 149

Which of the following financial statements shows the financial position of the business on a particular date?

- A. Income statement

- B. Expense accounts
- C. Balance sheet
- D. General ledger

Answer: C

Explanation:

The correct answer is A (Balance sheet) because, within the NCMA Contract Management Body of Knowledge (CMBOK), the balance sheet is the financial statement that provides a snapshot of an organization's financial position at a specific point in time . It presents the relationship between assets, liabilities, and equity , which together reflect the organization's overall financial health.

The balance sheet follows the fundamental accounting equation:

Assets = Liabilities + Equity . Assets represent what the organization owns, liabilities represent what it owes, and equity reflects the residual interest of owners or shareholders. This information is critical for contract managers when assessing the financial stability and capability of contractors or suppliers.

Option C (Income statement) measures financial performance over a period of time (revenues and expenses), not at a specific date.

Option B (Expense accounts) are components of financial records, not a standalone financial statement. Option D (General ledger) is a comprehensive record of all financial transactions but does not present a summarized financial position.

CMBOK emphasizes that understanding financial statements is essential for evaluating contractor responsibility, managing financial risk, and ensuring sound decision-making. The balance sheet, in particular, enables contract managers to assess liquidity, solvency, and overall financial strength at a given moment.

NEW QUESTION # 150

Avoiding confrontation and forced consensus are examples of resisting forces to _____.

- A. competence
- B. collaboration
- C. vision
- D. character

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is C (collaboration) because, within the NCMA Contract Management Body of Knowledge (CMBOK), effective leadership emphasizes constructive collaboration , which requires open dialogue, healthy conflict, and the ability to challenge ideas to achieve optimal outcomes. Avoiding confrontation and forcing consensus are behaviors that undermine true collaboration. Collaboration in contract management is not about simply agreeing or avoiding disagreement; rather, it involves engaging diverse perspectives , addressing conflicts directly, and working through differences to arrive at well-informed, balanced decisions. When individuals avoid confrontation, important issues may remain unresolved, leading to poor decision-making, hidden risks, and suboptimal contract outcomes.

Similarly, forced consensus can suppress valuable viewpoints, resulting in agreements that lack thorough analysis or stakeholder buy-in.

In the CMBOK leadership framework, contract managers are expected to foster an environment where constructive disagreement is encouraged , and where teams can openly discuss competing ideas. This aligns with competencies such as integrative thinking and effective communication, which support innovation and better problem-solving.

Option A (vision) relates to strategic direction, not interpersonal dynamics. Option B (competence) refers to skills and abilities, not team interaction behaviors. Option D (character) involves ethical traits but does not specifically address group collaboration dynamics.

Therefore, avoiding confrontation and forced consensus are clear examples of resisting effective collaboration , which is essential for successful contract management.
