EXIN Certified Data Centre Professional (CDCP) Sample Questions (Q73-Q78):

NEW QUESTION # 73

Which is the most damaging type of floor load?

- A. Rolling Load (RL)
- B. Concentrated Load / Point Load (CP/ PL)
- C. Uniformly Distributed Load (UDL)
- D. All loads are equally damaging to raised floor tiles

Answer: A

Explanation:

The most damaging type of floor load for raised floor tiles in a data centre is the rolling load (RL), according to the CDCP Preparation Guide1 and various web sources234. A rolling load is the load that is applied by a moving object, such as a pallet jack, a forklift, or a rack on wheels. A rolling load can cause more stress and fatigue on the raised floor tiles than a static load, such as a concentrated load (CP) or a uniformly distributed load (UDL), because it creates dynamic forces and impacts that can crack, dent, or deform the tiles. Moreover, a rolling load can also damage the pedestals and stringers that support the tiles, and cause the tiles to become loose or misaligned. Therefore, when designing and installing a raised floor system, it is important to consider the maximum rolling load that the tiles can withstand, and to use appropriate materials and methods to enhance the strength and durability of the tiles. For example, some possible solutions include using steel or concrete-filled tiles, reinforcing the edges and corners of the tiles, and using locking or gravity-held systems to secure the tiles.
