Google Associate Google Workspace Administrator Sample Questions (Q101-Q106):

NEW QUESTION # 101
Your organization allows employees to use their personal devices for work purposes. You want to ensure these devices follow the company's security policies. You need to choose a mobile management solution that provides minimal passcode enforcement and allows for an admin to remotely wipe a user's account from the device. You also want to avoid having to install agents on employees' personal devices. What should you do?

- A. Implement Google's basic management on mobile devices.
- B. Enforce a strong password policy, and enforce the password policy at the next sign-in.
- C. Deploy a third-party mobile device management (MDM) solution.
- D. Implement Google's advanced management on mobile devices.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Google's basic management for mobile devices allows administrators to enforce minimal security policies, such as passcode enforcement, without requiring the installation of any agents on employees' personal devices. This solution also allows for remotely wiping a user's account from the device if needed, ensuring data security while maintaining a less intrusive management approach for personal devices.

NEW QUESTION # 102
You are designing a group structure for your company that will be used to grant access to a specific shared drive. You need this solution to automatically add and remove employees based on their job role. What should you do?

- A. Create a security group. Add all employees with the desired job role. Grant the security group access to the shared drive.
- B. Create a distribution list. Add all employees with the desired job role. Grant the distribution list access to the shared drive.
- C. Create a configuration group. Add users on an exception basis. Grant the configuration group access to the shared drive.
- D. Create a dynamic group. Set the membership criteria to the desired job role. Grant the dynamic group access to the shared drive.

Answer: D

Explanation:
A dynamic group automatically manages its membership based on user attributes, such as job role. This approach ensures that employees are automatically added or removed from the group based on their role, minimizing manual effort and ensuring that the group always reflects the current team composition. Granting this dynamic group access to the shared drive ensures that the right users have the appropriate permissions without requiring constant manual updates.

NEW QUESTION # 103
The legal department at your organization is working on a time-critical merger and acquisition (M&A) deal. They urgently require access to specific email communications from an employee who is currently on leave. The organization's current retention policy is set to indefinite. You need to retrieve the required emails for the legal department in a manner that ensures data privacy. What should you do?

- A. Temporarily grant the legal department access to the employee's email account with a restricted scope that is limited to the

M&A-related emails.
- B. Use Google Vault to create a matter specific to the M&A deal. Search for relevant emails within the employee's mailbox. Export and share relevant emails with your legal department.
- C. Ask a colleague with delegate access to the employee's mailbox to identify and forward the relevant emails to the legal department.
- D. Instruct the IT department to directly access and forward the relevant emails to the legal department.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Using Google Vault to create a matter specific to the M&A deal allows for legal, secure, and privacy-compliant retrieval of emails. You can search for the specific emails related to the merger and acquisition, export them, and share them with the legal department without granting direct access to the employee's mailbox. This approach ensures both data privacy and compliance with organizational policies.

NEW QUESTION # 104

A team of temporary employees left your organization after completing a shared project. Per company policy, you need to disable their Google Workspace accounts while preserving all project data and related communications in Google Vault for a minimum of two years. You want to comply with this policy while minimizing cost. What should you do?

- A. Move the former employees to their own organizational unit (OU) and disable access to Google services for that OU.
- B. Purchase and assign Archived User licenses to the former employees.
- C. Transfer the former employees' files and data to active user accounts. Delete the former employees' Workspace accounts.
- D. Purchase additional user licenses and suspend the former employees' accounts.

Answer: B

Explanation:
Google Workspace offers Archived User licenses, which allow you to retain access to the data and communications of former employees without paying for a full user license. This option ensures compliance with the policy of retaining project data and communications in Google Vault while minimizing costs by avoiding unnecessary full user licenses.

NEW QUESTION # 105

Several employees at your company received messages with links to malicious websites. The messages appear to have been sent by your company's human resources department. You need to identify which users received the emails and prevent a recurrence of similar incidents in the future. What should you do?

- A. Search the sender's email address by using Email Log Search. Identify the users that received the messages. Instruct them to mark them as spam in Gmail, delete the messages, and empty the trash.
- B. Search for the sender's email address by using the security investigation tool. Mark the messages as phishing. Add the sender's email address to the Blocked senders list in the Spam, Phishing and Malware setting in Gmail to automatically reject future messages.
- C. Search for the sender's email address by using the security investigation tool. Delete the messages. Turn on the safety options for spoofing and authentication protection in Gmail settings.
- D. Collect a list of users who received the messages. Search the recipients' email addresses in Google Vault. Export and download the malicious emails in PST file format. Add the sender's email address to a quarantine list setting in Gmail to quarantine any future emails from the sender.

Answer: B

Explanation:
The security investigation tool in Google Workspace allows you to identify the impacted users and messages. By marking the messages as phishing, you acknowledge their malicious nature, helping to protect the users. Adding the sender's email address to the Blocked senders list ensures that future messages from this sender will be automatically blocked, preventing recurrence of similar incidents.
