NEW QUESTION # 108

Under which scenario Web Server flow will be used?

- A. Used for web applications when server-side code needs to interact with APIS.
- B. Used for verifying Access protected resources.
- C. Used for mobile applications and testing legacy Integrations.
- D. Used for server-side components when page needs to be rendered.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

The web server flow is used for web applications when server-side code needs to interact with APIs. This flow implements the OAuth 2.0 authorization code grant type, which allows the web app to obtain an access token and a refresh token from Salesforce after the user grants permission¹. The web app can then use the access token to call the Salesforce APIs and use the refresh token to obtain a new access token when the previous one expires². The other options are not valid scenarios for using the web server flow. The web server flow is not used for server-side components when page needs to be rendered, as this does not involve API calls. The web server flow is not used for mobile applications and testing legacy integrations, as these scenarios are better suited for other OAuth flows, such as the user-agent flow or the password flow³. The web server flow is not used for verifying access protected resources, as this is a general purpose of OAuth, not a specific scenario for the web server flow. NEW QUESTION # 110

A division of a Northern Trail Outfitters (NTO) purchased Salesforce. NTO uses a third party identity provider (IdP) to validate user credentials against its corporate Lightweight Directory Access Protocol (LDAP) directory. NTO wants to help employees remember as passwords as possible.

What should an identity architect recommend?

- A. Setup Salesforce as an IdP to authenticate against the LDAP directory.
- B. Setup Salesforce as an Authentication Provider to the existing IdP.
- C. Use Salesforce connect to synchronize LDAP passwords to Salesforce.
- D. Setup Salesforce as a Service Provider to the existing IdP.

Answer: D

Explanation:

To help employees remember fewer passwords, an identity architect should recommend setting up Salesforce as a service provider (SP) to the existing IdP. A SP is the system that relies on the IdP for authentication and provides access to its services based on the SAML assertions from the IdP. To set up Salesforce as a SP, you need to create a connected app for Salesforce in the IdP, enable SAML and configure the SAML settings, such as the entity ID, ACS URL, and subject type. You also need to enable SSO for your Salesforce org, upload the IdP certificate, and configure the SSO settings, such as the issuer, identity type, and service provider initiated request binding.
