NEW QUESTION # 223

While working as a network administrator, you need to do DNS based global routing and don't have requirements for TLS (Transport Layer Security) protocol termination ("SSL offload"), per- HTTPS/HTTP request or application-layer processing. Which of the following load balancing solutions would you use?

- A. Traffic Manager
- B. Application Gateway
- C. Front Door
- D. PowerShell

Answer: A

Explanation:

Azure Traffic Manager is a DNS-based traffic load balancing solution that allows optimal distribution of the traffic to services across global Azure regions, offering high responsiveness and availability.

Option A is incorrect. An application gateway is recommended for scenarios like if you need to load balance between your servers in a region at the application layer.

Option B is correct. For scenarios like the given one, a traffic manager suits the best.

Option C is incorrect. Front door suits scenarios like if you want to optimize the global routing of web traffic and improve top-tier end-users performance and reliability via quick global failover.

Option D is incorrect. PowerShell is not a load balancing option.
