NEW QUESTION # 52

What can you control with the reason code in Accounts Receivable? Note: There are 3 correct answers to this question.

- A. The exclusion of disputed residual items from credit limit checks
- B. The document type of the payment
- C. The account where a residual item is posted
- D. The type of payment notice sent to a customer
- E. The special G/L indicator for the down payment

Answer: A,C,D

Explanation:

In SAP S/4HANA, the reason code in Accounts Receivable (AR) is a powerful tool used to provide additional information about specific transactions, such as payments, residual items, or disputes. It allows for better control and customization of processes related to receivables management. Let's analyze each option to determine the correct answers.

Explanation of Each Option:

A. The type of payment notice sent to a customer

* Correct : The reason code can influence the type of payment notice sent to a customer. For example, it can determine whether a dunning notice, payment reminder, or other communication is triggered based on the reason for the transaction (e.g., partial payment, dispute). This ensures that the appropriate action is taken based on the context of the transaction.

* Reference : According to SAP documentation, reason codes are used to categorize transactions and trigger specific actions, including the generation of payment notices.

B. The account where a residual item is posted

* Correct : The reason code can control the account where a residual item is posted during partial payments or write-offs. For example, if a customer makes a partial payment and leaves a residual amount, the reason code determines whether the residual amount is posted to a specific G/L account (e.

g., a clearing account or a disputed items account). This ensures proper accounting treatment for residual items.

* Reference : SAP documentation confirms that reason codes are used to define the posting behavior for residual items, ensuring accurate financial reporting.

C. The document type of the payment

* Incorrect : The document type of the payment is determined by the payment process configuration, not by the reason code. While reason codes provide additional information about the transaction, they do not directly influence the document type assigned to the payment.

* Reference : Document types are configured separately in the payment program and are independent of reason codes.

D. The special G/L indicator for the down payment

* Incorrect : The special G/L indicator for down payments is defined during the configuration of special G/L transactions, not through reason codes. Reason codes are not used to assign or control special G/L indicators, which are specific to down payments, guarantees, or other special transactions.

* Reference : Special G/L indicators are configured independently and are unrelated to reason codes.

E. The exclusion of disputed residual items from credit limit checks

* Correct : The reason code can be used to exclude disputed residual items from credit limit checks .

For example, if a residual item is marked as disputed using a specific reason code, it can be excluded from credit exposure calculations. This prevents disputed amounts from negatively impacting the customer's creditworthiness.

* Reference : SAP documentation highlights that reason codes can be used to flag disputed items and exclude them from credit management processes, ensuring fair credit evaluations.

Key References to SAP Documentation:

* SAP S/4HANA Finance for Accounts Receivable : Explains the role of reason codes in managing receivables, including their impact on payment notices, residual items, and credit management.

* SAP Help Portal - Reason Codes in AR : Provides detailed guidance on configuring and using reason codes in Accounts Receivable processes.

* Credit Management in SAP S/4HANA : Describes how reason codes can exclude disputed items from credit limit checks.

* Residual Item Posting : Highlights the use of reason codes to control the posting of residual items to specific accounts.
