NEW QUESTION # 49

You need to protect an entire SVM and all of its data volumes and have decided to use SnapMirror SVM. The DR cluster uses a different subnet from the production cluster, and the destination SVM has the added requirement of also being online and serving data as read-only.

What option would you set to achieve both goals?

- A. Set the -type option to automated-failover in the applied snapmirror policy.
- B. Use the -identity-preserve option set to true in the snapmirror create command.
- C. Use the -identity-preserve option set to false in the snapmirror create command.
- D. Set the -discard-configs option to network in the applied snapmirror policy.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Setting -identity-preserve false allows the destination SVM to have a different network configuration, which is required since the DR site uses a different subnet. It also enables the destination SVM to be online and serve data in read-only mode, which meets the requirement for data availability during normal operation without promoting the SVM.
