I. CASE STUDY

Green University is a mid-sized institution with approximately 8,000 students and 400 academic staff. Each semester, the university must manage course enrollment for all undergraduate and postgraduate programmes. Currently, students submit paper-based registration forms to their faculty office, and clerks manually enter the data into spreadsheets. This process is error-prone, slow, and creates long queues during the registration window. The university's administration has therefore decided to commission a web-based Course Registration System (CRS) to automate and streamline the entire workflow.

The CRS is expected to serve four main groups of users. Students need to browse the catalogue of available courses, check their eligibility based on completed prerequisites, submit registration requests, and track the status of each request in real time. If a course is fully booked, a student may join an electronic waitlist; should a registered student later drop the course, the system automatically notifies and enrolls the first eligible student on the waitlist. Lecturers need to review the roster of students enrolled in their courses, record midterm and final grades, and release grades to students once the grading period closes. Academic Staff (administrators) are responsible for defining the semester timetable, setting and publishing course quotas, opening and closing the registration window, approving exceptional cases, and generating enrolment and grade-distribution reports. Finally, a System Administrator manages user accounts, configures system parameters, and oversees scheduled data backups.

From a technical standpoint, the university imposes several constraints. The system must remain responsive—handling at least 1,000 simultaneous users during peak registration periods with a page-response time under 3 seconds. Because student records and grade data are sensitive, all communication must be encrypted using TLS 1.2 or higher, and access must be governed by a role-based access control (RBAC) model so that each user sees only the functions and data relevant to their role. The platform must be available 99.5% of the time during the semester, with any planned maintenance scheduled outside the registration window. The interface must be accessible on both desktop and mobile browsers and must conform to WCAG 2.1 Level AA accessibility standards. The architecture should also support horizontal scaling so that additional server capacity can be added smoothly as student numbers grow in future years.
