What is the reason?

- A. The report has no result and must be reconfigured.
- B. You must create a trigger to run the report first.
- C. The report does not have auto-cache and extended log filtering enabled.
- D. The playbook is currently running and will be available after it is finished.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 65

Refer to the exhibit with partial output:

A screenshot of a text editor showing a partial JSON object. The object has properties 'checksum', 'hash', 'method', 'data', and a large base64 encoded string. The 'data' property contains a long string of characters: "H4stAAAAAAAAA722bX/05RAV9+vETz7sAvQgd7BRmA/uHbaBmI ZM1S5qbf1f78hpBEgnL17u1hKYVtzQyHM8Ph6OKPo7eN/f0qTb/ ETy9nRREij/AR1-VPxX7L40tD7+7Wm1+/n97OH3rkoZdu1yhNSrm CTMzWRfn15e05vhd+/pwb/kPRqeScCVcqDgmvV4hC8Tl4EbCnNAY nunbvrevh5VkTNxhYE2ZPmCkcTFxN6fcvVhix31hS5O13w37e3c2

Your colleague exported a playbook and has sent it to you for review. You open the file in a text editor and observe the output as shown in the exhibit.

Which statement about the export is true?

- A. The option to include the connector was not selected.
- B. The export data type is zipped.
- C. The playbook is misconfigured.
- D. Your colleague put a password on the export.

Answer: B

Explanation:

In the exhibit, the data structure shows a checksum field and a data field with a long, seemingly encoded string. This format is indicative of a file that has been compressed or encoded for storage and transfer.

* Export Data Type:

* The data field is likely a base64-encoded string, which is commonly used to represent binary data in text format. Base64 encoding is often applied to data that has been compressed (zipped) for easier handling and transfer. The checksum field, with an MD5 hash, provides a way to verify the integrity of the data after decompression.

* Option Analysis:

* A. The export data type is zipped: Correct. The compressed and encoded format of the data suggests that the export is in a zipped format, allowing for efficient storage and transfer.

* B. The playbook is misconfigured: There is no indication of misconfiguration in this exhibit.

The presence of the checksum and data fields aligns with standard export practices.

* C. The option to include the connector was not selected: There is no evidence in the output to conclude that connectors are missing. Connectors are typically listed separately and would not directly affect the checksum and encoded data structure.

* D. Your colleague put a password on the export: There's no indication of password protection in the exhibit. Password protection would likely alter the data structure, and there would be some mention of encryption.

Conclusion:

* Correct answer: A. The export data type is zipped.

* This answer is consistent with the typical use of base64 encoding for compressed (zipped) data exports in FortiAnalyzer.
