HashiCorp Certified: Terraform Associate (004) (HCTA0-004) Sample Questions (Q67-Q72):

NEW QUESTION # 67

Which of these statements about HCP Terraform/Terraform Cloud workspaces is false?

- A. Plans and applies can be triggered via version control system integrations.
- B. You must use the CLI to switch between workspaces.
- C. They can securely store cloud credentials.
- D. They have role-based access controls.

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Terraform Cloud, you can switch between workspaces using both the web UI and CLI. The statement that you "must use the CLI" is false. Workspaces can securely store cloud credentials, offer role-based access control, and integrate with VCS to trigger plan and apply operations.

NEW QUESTION # 68

What kind of configuration block will create an infrastructure object with settings specified within the block?

- A. state
- B. data
- C. provider
- D. resource

Answer: D

Explanation:

This is the kind of configuration block that will create an infrastructure object with settings specified within the block. The other options are not used for creating infrastructure objects, but for configuring providers, accessing state data, or querying data sources.

NEW QUESTION # 69

A resource block is shown in the Exhibit space of this page. What is the Terraform resource name of the resource block?

- A. google
- B. main
- C. test
- D. compute_instance

Answer: B

Explanation:

In Terraform, the resource name is the second argument in the resource block.

The structure of a resource block is:

resource "provider_resource_type" "resource_name" {
  # Configuration settings

Here, the provider type is `google_compute_instance`, and the resource name is `"main"`.

The name `"test"` is simply the value assigned to the `name` attribute, which is unrelated to the Terraform resource name.

`"google"` and `"compute_instance"` are part of the provider and resource type, not the resource name.

NEW QUESTION # 70

`terraform init` creates an example `main.tf` file in the current directory.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: B

Explanation:

`terraform init` does not create a `main.tf` file.

It initializes the Terraform working directory, downloads provider plugins, and configures the backend.

Terraform does not generate an example configuration (`main.tf`); users must create it manually.

NEW QUESTION # 71

When should you use the force-unlock command?

- A. Automatic unlocking failed
- B. apply failed due to a state lock
- C. You see a status message that you cannot acquire the lock
- D. You have a high priority change

Answer: A

Explanation:

You should use the force-unlock command when automatic unlocking failed. Terraform will lock your state for all operations that could write state, such as plan, apply, or destroy. This prevents others from acquiring the lock and potentially corrupting your state. State locking happens automatically on all operations that could write state and you won't see any message that it is happening. If state locking fails, Terraform will not continue. You can disable state locking for most commands with the -lock flag but it is not recommended. If acquiring the lock is taking longer than expected, Terraform will output a status message. If Terraform doesn't output a message, state locking is still occurring if your backend supports it. Terraform has a force-unlock command to manually unlock the state if unlocking failed. Be very careful with this command. If you unlock the state when someone else is holding the lock it could cause multiple writers. Force unlock should only be used to unlock your own lock in the situation where automatic unlocking failed. To protect you, the force-unlock command requires a unique lock ID. Terraform will output this lock ID if unlocking fails. This lock ID acts as a nonce, ensuring that locks and unlocks target the correct lock. The other situations are not valid reasons to use the force-unlock command. You should not use the force-unlock command if you have a high priority change, if apply failed due to a state lock, or if you see a status message that you cannot acquire the lock. These situations indicate that someone else is holding the lock and you should wait for them to finish their operation or contact them to resolve the issue. Using the force-unlock command in these cases could result in data loss or inconsistency. Reference = [State Locking], [Command: force-unlock]
