Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 130

In a Mule application, a flow contains two JMS Consume operations that are used to connect to a JMS broker and consume messages from two JMS destinations. The Mule application then joins the two consumed JMS messages together.

The JMS broker does not implement high availability and periodically experiences scheduled outages of up to 10 minutes for routine maintenance.

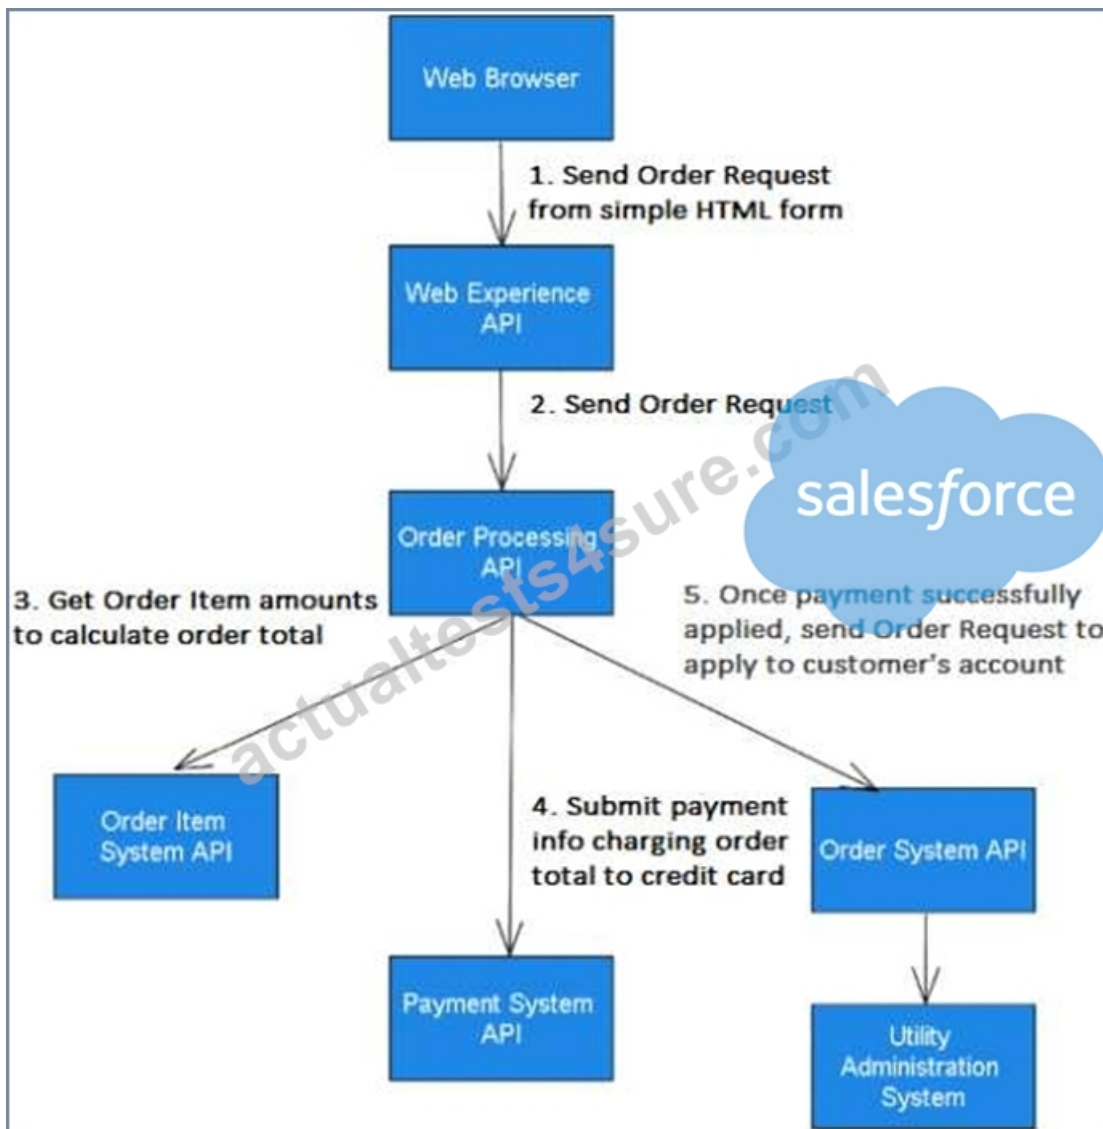

How should the Mule flow be built so it can recover from the expected outages?

- A. Enclose the two JMS operations in an Until Successful scope
- B. Configure a transaction for the JMS connector
- C. Configure a reconnection strategy for the JMS connector
- D. Enclose the two JMS operations in a Try scope with an On Error Continue error handler

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 131

Refer to the exhibit.

A telecommunications company receives orders (bill payments) from customers who submit a simple HTML form (no JavaScript or Web Assembly). Currently the process is synchronous and the customer is notified after everything is complete. The requirement is that the customer is notified of payment (charging the customer's credit card) through the response to the browser, but the customer can also be notified when the order is applied to the customer's account at a later time. Due to an increase in customers, the system has been unable to handle the load and the solution has been experiencing performance and reliability issues. Which request point could be replaced with an event-driven API using a JMS queue to help mitigate the performance issues, increase the fault tolerance, and meet the requirements?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3
