CompTIA Data+ Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q136-Q141):

NEW QUESTION # 136

A customer list from a financial services company is shown below:

A data analyst wants to create a likely-to-buy score on a scale from 0 to 100, based on an average of the three numerical variables: number of credit cards, age, and income. Which of the following should the analyst do to the variables to ensure they all have the same weight in the score calculation?

- A. Calculate the percentiles of the variables.
- B. Normalize the variables.
- C. Recode the variables.
- D. Calculate the standard deviations of the variables.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Normalizing the variables means scaling them to a common range, such as 0 to 1 or -1 to 1, so that they have the same weight in the score calculation. Recoding the variables means changing their values or categories, which would alter their meaning and distribution. Calculating the percentiles of the variables means ranking them relative to each other, which would not account for their actual magnitudes. Calculating the standard deviations of the variables means measuring their variability, which would not make them comparable.

NEW QUESTION # 137

Which of the following would be used to store unstructured data from different sources?

- A. A database management system
- B. A data warehouse
- C. A data lake
- D. A database

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 138

Which of the following will MOST likely be streamed live?

- A. Flat files
- B. Machine data
- C. Key-value pairs
- D. Delimited rows

Answer: B

Explanation:

Machine data is the most likely type of data to be streamed live, as it refers to data generated by machines or devices, such as sensors, web servers, network devices, etc. Machine data is often produced continuously and in large volumes, requiring real-time processing and analysis. Other types of data, such as key-value pairs, delimited rows, and flat files, are more likely to be stored in databases or files and processed in batches.

NEW QUESTION # 139

Which of the following can be used to translate data into another form so it can only be read by a user who has a key or a password?

- A. Data protection.
- B. Data masking.
- C. Data transmission.
- D. Data encryption.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Data encryption can be used to translate data into another form so it can only be read by a user who has a key or a password. Data encryption is a process of transforming data using an algorithm or a cipher to make it unreadable to anyone except those who have the key or the password to decrypt it. Data encryption is a common method of protecting data from unauthorized access, modification, or theft. Reference: Guide to CompTIA Data+ and Practice Questions - Pass Your Cert
