What are some of the functions of SAP Extended Warehouse Management? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question

- A. Storage-bin-level determination for incoming goods
- B. Inventory management at storage location level
- C. Mobile device integration
- D. Putaway with transfer orders

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

SAP Extended Warehouse Management (EWM) offers a wide range of functionalities to optimize warehouse operations. Among these, two key functions are:

* Mobile device integration (B): SAP EWM provides robust support for mobile devices, which facilitates real-time data entry and retrieval in warehouse operations. This integration allows warehouse staff to perform various tasks such as goods receipt, picking, and inventory counts directly from the warehouse floor, enhancing efficiency and accuracy.

* Storage-bin-level determination for incoming goods (C): SAP EWM is capable of determining the optimal storage bin for incoming goods based on various criteria such as product dimensions, weight, and storage conditions. This feature ensures efficient use of warehouse space and streamlines the putaway process.

* Putaway with transfer orders (A) is more associated with the Warehouse Management (WM) system, which is the predecessor of EWM. In EWM, the concept is advanced with more detailed processes and functionalities.

* Inventory management at the storage location level (D) is typically managed in the Inventory Management (IM) component of SAP, rather than in EWM, which operates at a more granular bin level within the warehouse.

* Additional logistical documents (A) are not created as a result of document splitting, as it is primarily a financial accounting process.

* Additional controlling documents (B) are not directly created by document splitting; however, the detailed financial information resulting from document splitting can enhance controlling and cost analysis.

* Additional values (C) refers to the creation of more detailed financial data within existing documents, rather than the creation of new documents.
