1.A school customer purchased two Huawei OceanStorPacific series storages for daily business deployment. The engineer needs to configure the DPC service on the two storages. Which of the following configurations of the engineer is wrong?

A. If the upper-layer business has high requirements for data security, engineers need to configure the storage pool type as encryption type when creating a fusion storage pool.

B. When creating a namespace, engineers need to select the security mode and application type.

C. Before creating a fusion storage pool, engineers need to enable the file service of the node through DeviceManager before they can proceed with the subsequent creation process.

D. When the storage network is RoCE networking, engineers can use the systemctl stop llDpad.service command to shut down the llDpad service.

Answer: C

2.A government customer purchased two Huawei all-flash storages for business deployment. During the use of the storage, engineers found that the storage performance often fluctuated. If the engineer wanted to locate the storage performance fluctuation problem at this time, it would involve many operations.

1- Check whether there are obvious changes in IO model or business load at the fluctuation time point

2-Analyze the latency fluctuation module through the latency location tool FTDS on the storage side

3- Check whether there is an obvious hit rate mutation at the fluctuation time point

4- Check whether there is a very small IO scenario at the fluctuation time point

5- Check whether there is any obvious hardware resource bottleneck on the storage side at the fluctuation time point

6- Check whether there are obvious storage background tasks at the fluctuation time point

I would like to ask, among the above operations, which operations can locate the problem and which operations cannot?

A. 456 can locate the problem, but 123 cannot

B. 123456 can help locate the problem

C. 12 can locate the problem, but 3456 cannot

D. 123 can locate the problem, but 456 cannot

Answer: B

3.A government customer purchased multiple Huawei distributed storage devices to provide DPC file services for upper-layer businesses.

During the DPC service configuration process, engineers need to plan and configure storage switches. Which of the following descriptions of storage switch configuration requirements is wrong?

A. During the configuration process, if the control network does not cross subnets, but there will be cross-subnet expansion operations later, engineers must configure VLAN and flow control, but there is no clear configuration requirement for the control network gateway

B. When the transmission protocol is RoCE, engineers need to configure VLAN and flow control

C. Engineers can form M-LAG with multiple switches, and when the transmission protocol is IB, engineers need to enable subnet management

D. During the configuration process, engineers need to configure the IP address of the switch management network port

Answer: A
