NEW QUESTION # 22
Which component is required to support Avaya 1600 series IP phones on IP Office?

- A. Secondary Server
- B. Voicemail Pro
- C. DHCP server
- D. SIP trunk license

Answer: C

Explanation:
Avaya 1600 series IP phones (H.323-based) require a DHCP server (Option A) to assign IP addresses and provide the TFTP/HTTP server address for firmware and settings. Option B is for trunks, Option C is for voicemail, and Option D is for resilience-not phone support. References: Avaya IP Office 1600 Series Configuration Guide.

NEW QUESTION # 23
A call is directed to the first hunt group, then it overflows to a second hunt group, and then the call is sent to voicemail. To which mailbox was the call sent?

- A. The first hunt group mailbox only
- B. Both the first and second hunt group user mailboxes
- C. The second hunt group extension group mailbox only
- D. The general sampling mailbox

Answer: C

Explanation:

In IP Office, hunt groups can have their own voicemail mailboxes. When a call overflows from one hunt group to another and then goes to voicemail, it is typically sent to the mailbox of the last hunt group in the chain unless otherwise configured. Option C, "The second hunt group extension group mailbox only," is correct because the call ends up being handled by the second hunt group's voicemail when it overflows and no one answers. Option A is incorrect as the first group is bypassed. Option B is wrong because calls don't split across multiple mailboxes in this scenario. Option D (general sampling mailbox) is not a standard feature for this call flow.References: Avaya IP Office Hunt Group Configuration Guide.
