Which of the following commands can be used to create a new file that is 100kB in size?

- A. touch
- B. file
- C. mkfile
- D. dd

Answer: D

Explanation:

The dd command can be used to create a new file that is 100kB in size. The dd command copies data from one source to another, using specified input and output block sizes. To create a new file that is 100kB in size, the dd command can use /dev/zero as the input source, which provides an endless stream of zeros, and specify the output file name, the output block size (bs) and the count of blocks to copy. For example, dd if=/dev/zero of=file.txt bs=1k count=100 will create a file named file.txt that is 100kB in size. The file command can be used to determine the type of a file. The mkfile command is not a valid Linux command. The touch command can be used to create a new empty file or update the access and modification times of an existing file, but it does not specify the size
