ASET Ethics Examination-ASET Professional Practice Exam (PPE) Sample

Questions (Q95-Q100):

NEW QUESTION # 95

Which of the following is the most likely reason that a regulated member was found to be unethical?

- A. The member cut fees to an extent that resulted in incompetent service.
- B. The member put service above financial gain.
- C. The member refused to propose an estimated cost lower than the realistic expected full estimate.
- D. A potential client was made aware that a competitive pricing strategy was offered.

Answer: A

Explanation:

While professional technologists operate in a competitive free market and are allowed to offer competitive pricing strategies, the ASET Code of Ethics mandates that members must provide competent, high-quality service that protects the public. Engaging in "fee cutting" or "lowballing" to win a contract becomes a severe ethical violation when the fee is reduced to such an extent that the professional can no longer afford to allocate the necessary time, resources, or qualified personnel to complete the work safely and up to industry standards. If a member slashes their budget and subsequently rushes designs, skips crucial testing phases, or relies on unqualified staff to maintain their profit margin, they are directly endangering the public and failing in their professional duty. Putting service above financial gain is highly ethical, and refusing to provide an unrealistically low estimate is an example of professional integrity. Therefore, cutting fees to a point that directly results in incompetent or unsafe service is the clear unethical action.

NEW QUESTION # 96

Which of the following are the most significant risks related to purchasing and maintaining computer-related assets?

- A. Hardware being physically destroyed
- B. Software or hardware being stolen by employees
- C. An electrical surge destroying hardware and data
- D. Massive software or hardware failures, data loss, and unauthorized intrusions

Answer: D

Explanation:

In modern engineering and technology practice, businesses rely entirely on digital infrastructure for design, communication, data storage, and project management. While physical destruction, electrical surges, and petty theft (Options A, B, and C) are valid operational risks, they are generally localized and easily mitigated by standard insurance policies and physical security. The most significant, catastrophic risks related to IT infrastructure are massive system failures, irreversible data loss, and unauthorized intrusions (cyberattacks/hacking). These events can cripple an entire organization simultaneously. Data loss can wipe out years of proprietary engineering work, leading to massive financial liabilities and breached contracts. Unauthorized intrusions (like ransomware or data breaches) directly compromise client confidentiality and privacy laws (such as PIPEDA), potentially destroying the firm's professional reputation and resulting in severe legal penalties. Managing these complex cybersecurity and redundancy risks is a critical duty for modern technological professionals.

NEW QUESTION # 97

According to the four branches of philosophy, what is ethics the study of?

- A. Very basic ideas
- B. Knowledge itself
- C. The rules of reasoning
- D. Right and wrong

Answer: D

Explanation:

Philosophy is traditionally divided into several main branches. Metaphysics is the study of existence and very basic ideas (Option B). Epistemology is the study of knowledge itself, how we acquire it, and its limits (Option C). Logic is the study of the rules of valid reasoning and argumentation (Option D).

Ethics (also known as moral philosophy) is specifically defined as the study of right and wrong, good and evil, and the moral principles that govern a person's behavior or the conducting of an activity. In the context of professional practice, studying ethics involves understanding how to systematically evaluate complex situations, balance competing duties (e.g., duty to employer vs. duty to the public), and determine the most morally defensible course of action. It provides the intellectual framework necessary for professionals to navigate the grey areas of technology, business, and law while maintaining their integrity.

NEW QUESTION # 98

In general, torts must be intentional or negligent to result in liability. In which of the following situations can the defendant be considered liable?

- A. A fall outside a building that resulted in a broken leg was considered accidental.
- B. Someone was injured after the defendant told them not to enter the building.
- C. An individual's reputation was damaged due to a wrong decision.
- D. A poor building design caused injury years after it was built.

Answer: D

Explanation:

In tort law, a professional can be held liable for "negligence" if they owed a duty of care, breached that duty by failing to meet the standard of a reasonable professional, and caused damage as a direct result.

A classic example of professional negligence is a "poor building design" (such as a structural flaw or failure to meet code). Crucially, the liability for this negligence does not disappear the moment the building is completed. Under the concept of latent defects and depending on provincial ultimate limitation periods (often 10 to 15 years), a professional can be held civilly liable if their poor design causes injury or catastrophic failure many years after the construction was finished. Options C and D involve situations where the defendant likely fulfilled their duty of care (by issuing a warning) or where the event was a pure accident lacking negligent intent. Therefore, the ongoing liability for a dangerous design flaw is the clearest example of tort liability.

NEW QUESTION # 99

A regulated member on a work site is asked to coordinate the disposal of explosives left behind by a previous employer. In meeting with construction staff on the site, the member learns that none of the staff is trained to handle explosives. Which of the following should be the member's first course of action in this situation?

- A. Allow the construction staff to dispose of the explosives under careful supervision.
- B. Notify the work site supervisor that the disposal will not be carried out, giving the reasons for refusal.
- C. Set up training for the construction staff in the proper handling of explosives.
- D. Contact the previous employer to arrange for disposal of the explosives.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The right-and duty-to refuse unsafe work is a fundamental pillar of both provincial Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) legislation and the ASET Code of Ethics. Regulated members are ethically bound to hold paramount the safety of the public and the workplace, and to only undertake assignments when qualified by training and experience. Explosives are highly regulated, intrinsically dangerous materials that require specialized, legally certified blasters or disposal units to handle.

Because neither the member nor the construction staff has the requisite training, attempting to dispose of them or even "supervise" untrained staff is illegal and catastrophically dangerous. The absolute first mandatory action is to immediately invoke the right to refuse unsafe work. The member must formally notify the work site supervisor that the disposal cannot and will not be carried out by the current team, explicitly citing the lack of specialized training and the severe safety hazard as the reasons for refusal. Only after the task is halted can safe alternatives (like hiring an explosive disposal contractor) be pursued.
