IBM MQ v9.4 Administrator - Professional Sample Questions (Q84-Q89):

NEW QUESTION # 84

In scenarios where multiple applications need to process messages from the same queue simultaneously, which IBM MQ feature ensures that messages are distributed among consumers without duplication, and how does it maintain data integrity?

- A. Clustering replicates messages to all queue managers, which ensures each consumer processes every message.
- B. Transactional queues automatically discard messages after the first consumer reads them.
- C. Queue Grouping distributes messages among multiple consumers so that each message is consumed by only one application, maintaining message integrity.
- D. Shared queues allow all consumers to read every message, which may lead to duplication.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 85

In an enterprise environment where messages must travel securely across multiple network segments with encryption, authentication, and integrity checks, which IBM MQ configuration provides end-to-end security while still supporting high-performance message delivery between heterogeneous systems?

- A. SSL/TLS-enabled channels with MQ authentication and authorization
- B. Application-side encryption only
- C. Non-persistent queues without encryption
- D. Plain-text channels with local authentication

Answer: A

Explanation:

Using SSL/TLS-enabled channels along with MQ authentication and authorization ensures secure, high-performance message delivery across different platforms.

NEW QUESTION # 86

In IBM MQ, how does the "dead-letter queue" mechanism operate when messages cannot be delivered to their intended destination, and what are the main benefits of configuring a dead-letter queue for enterprise applications?

- A. Messages are stored in a special queue called the dead-letter queue, allowing administrators to analyze undelivered messages and take corrective action
- B. Messages are automatically rerouted to random queues to prevent backlog
- C. Messages are converted to non-persistent and retried indefinitely
- D. Messages are discarded silently to improve performance

Answer: A

Explanation:

Dead-letter queues capture undelivered messages so administrators can inspect, analyze, and reprocess them if needed. This prevents message loss and helps maintain system integrity.

NEW QUESTION # 87

An international retail organization is experiencing challenges where thousands of orders are being placed per minute across multiple continents, and some messages are taking longer to reach their destination because they must cross different network boundaries. To guarantee that messages are not only delivered reliably but also in the exact sequence in which they were sent, which IBM MQ configuration should be implemented?

- A. Dead-letter queue redirection with monitoring
- B. Temporary dynamic queues for faster routing
- C. Message sequencing with logical message groups
- D. Queue manager clustering with workload balancing

Answer: C

Explanation:

Message groups in IBM MQ preserve the sequence of related messages across distributed systems, ensuring strict ordering in high-volume environments.

NEW QUESTION # 88

Which IBM MQ component is responsible for enabling communication between different queue managers by routing messages securely over the network, allowing interoperability between different platforms and MQ versions?

- A. Transaction manager
- B. Application program interface
- C. Message channel agent (MCA)
- D. Queue manager control agent

Answer: C

Explanation:

The Message Channel Agent (MCA) handles message routing between queue managers, providing secure and reliable communication.
