What is the role of the transaction manager within the database system architecture?

- A. The transaction manager logs insert, update, and delete queries, and the result is sent back to the application.
- B. The transaction manager is composed of a query processor, storage manager, transaction manager, log, and catalog.
- C. The transaction manager translates the query processor instructions into filesystem commands and uses an index to quickly locate the requested data.
- D. The transaction manager uses information from the catalog to perform query optimization.

Answer: A

Explanation:
A Transaction Manager ensures ACID (Atomicity, Consistency, Isolation, Durability) properties in database transactions. It manages concurrent transactions, ensuring no conflicts occur and logs modifications to support recovery mechanisms.
* Option A (Incorrect): Query optimization is managed by the query processor, not the transaction manager.
* Option B (Incorrect): The transaction manager is a component of the database architecture but is not composed of the entire system (query processor, storage manager, etc.).
* Option C (Correct): The transaction manager logs transactions like INSERT, UPDATE, and DELETE, ensuring consistency and recoverability.
* Option D (Incorrect): The storage manager is responsible for translating queries into filesystem commands.

sql

Result:
50 | 50
* This function ensures that numbers arealways positive, regardless of their original sign.
Why Other Options Are Incorrect:
* Option A (CONCAT) (Incorrect):Used tocombine strings(not numbers).
